CURRENT HISTORY

May 2010

Vol. 109, No. 727

CONTENTS

- 179 Nigeria's Season of Uncertainty Richard Joseph and Alexandra Gillies
The country has suffered a prolonged leadership crisis, punctuated by clashes in the Niger Delta and sectarian violence elsewhere. Now an untested leader has become acting president.
- 186 Ethiopia Is Headed for Chaos Berhanu Nega
Meles Zenawi's ethnocentric regime has slammed the door on a peaceful democratic transition. As despair stalks the nation, the prospect of violent rebellion looms.
- 193 African Economies' New Resilience Peter M. Lewis
The global downturn hit hard, but most African states are better positioned to rebound than they were during previous crises. Last in a series on changing relations between governments and markets.
- 200 Zuma's First Year R.W. Johnson
South African President Jacob Zuma remains a divisive figure, and tough economic times have exacerbated many of his country's long-standing problems.
- 205 More Aid Is Not the Answer Jonathan Glennie
Dependence on foreign assistance in Africa too often undermines the development of domestic governing institutions and the vital link of accountability between state and citizen.

PERSPECTIVE

- 210 The Rape of Zimbabwe Robert I. Rotberg
Ending Robert Mugabe's purge of his country's human and physical capital will require more pressure smartly applied, particularly by neighboring nations.

BOOKS

- 213 Behind China's Rise in Africa William W. Finan Jr.
A new book likens Beijing's proliferating interests on the continent to the dealings of a "Godfather" engaged in everything from oil and uranium to textiles and infrastructure.

President's Forum	7
The Emerging Republic of Korea Navy
A Japanese Perspective	13
Vice Admiral Yoji Koda, Japan Maritime Self-Defense Force (Retired)
The Republic of Korea Navy has made itself one of the most notable navies in the region. Challenges and issues still exist, but there are important areas in which it and the capable Japan Maritime Self-Defense Force can cooperate in the future.
Arctic Security Considerations and the U.S. Navy's Roadmap for the Arctic	35
Rear Admiral David W. Tiley, U.S. Navy, and Courtney C. St. John
The scope and magnitude of changes to the Arctic region as a result of a changing climate are great—shifts in species populations and distribution, more navigable transportation passages, increased shipping activity and resource extraction, and modified global circulation patterns. The Navy's Task Force Climate Change is addressing these considerations, which will shape safety and security in the Arctic.
The U.S. Navy's Transition to Jets	49
Robert C. Rubel
In this centennial year of naval aviation, it is interesting to observe that it has been jet powered for over half of its history. The transition was long and brutally expensive in terms of life and aircraft. However, it was, by any measure, a success.
Pieces of Eight
An Appraisal of U.S. Counterpiracy Options in the Horn of Africa	61
Lesley Anne Warner
The key to success against piracy off the coast of Somalia lies in linking current sea-based counterpiracy methods with approaches designed to remedy the underlying instability ashore that produced piracy in the first place.
China's Oil Security Pipe Dream
The Reality, and Strategic Consequences, of Seaborne Imports	89
Andrew S. Erickson and Gabriel B. Collins
It is widely believed in China that overland pipelines would greatly enhance the security of its oil supply. Market and geopolitical analysis, however, shows that they would not. Chinese decision makers must face the fact that, barring discovery of an economically viable large-scale substitute for crude oil, their nation's dependence on seaborne oil imports will only increase.

Formal Mentoring in the U.S. Military

Research Evidence, Lingering Questions, and Recommendations 113

W. Brad Johnson and Gene R. Andersen

Organizations that mentor produce members who are more rapidly promoted, more confident, and more likely to achieve leadership positions. Informal mentoring has flourished in the military for centuries, but should the military institutionalize the process?

For the first time in the modern era, Russia is now totally surrounded by countries and regions that are more dynamic than it is.
- 75 Reducing Tactical Nuclear Weapons in Europe Miles Pomper, William Potter and Nikolai Sokov
The intention to finally tackle the issue of tactical nuclear weapons is welcome, yet linking them with strategic weapons might create more problems than it solves.
- 97 Back to the Brink in Bosnia? Christopher S. Chivvis
Today in Sarajevo there is disturbing talk of an unravelling of the Dayton Accords. If the danger is real, the international community must stay fully engaged.
- 111 Parsing Pyongyang's Strategy Denny Roy
The argument that it is not politically feasible for North Korea to reach a rapprochement with Washington or Seoul should be rejected.

- 137 India and China: Conflict and Cooperation David M. Malone and Rohan Mukherjee
It is surprising that two states with such a rich and fractious history should have what appears to be a largely reactive relationship, but neither has developed a grand strategy with regard to the other.
