EDITOR'S NOTE

From this issue, the IOR-ARC Newsletter is renamed as Indian Ocean Watch. This newsletter is brought out by the Institute for Defence Studies and Analyses and is no longer a collaborative effort with the IOR-ARC Secretariat. The current issue tracks news items in the areas of maritime security, economic cooperation and environmental concerns/disaster management.

At the 12th Meeting of the Council of Ministers of IOR-ARC, amid calls for closer interaction among member states, the regional organisation expanded its membership to include Comoros as the 20th member and the United States of America as the sixth dialogue partner. In another important development during a recent visit to India, Australia's Prime Minister Julia Gillard has called for greater security cooperation between India and Australia. On the other hand, India's Defence Minister A.K. Anthony has underlined the key role of Indian navy in India's engagement with countries in the Indian Ocean region. In the meanwhile, South African National Defence Force will get additional funds from the treasury to cover for its anti- piracy patrols in the Mozambican channel.

A recent study on trade and investment prospects of the IOR-ARC reveals great prospects for regional trade in the region. At the same time in a recent conference, Malaysia called for greater economic cooperation with India. Similarly, Sri Lanka and India have appointed a joint task force to boost bilateral trade and investment. Indonesia recently hosted the fifth Asian Ministerial Conference on Disaster Risk Reduction (AMCDRR) where the gathering discussed a successor to the world's first comprehensive agreement on disaster risk reduction, the Hyogo Framework of Action (2000-2015) that came into effect after the 2004 Asian tsunami.

We look forward to comments and suggestions from our readers.

MARITIME SECURITY

Comoros joins IOR-ARC, US joins as its sixth dialogue partner

The 12th Meeting of the Council of Ministers of IOR-ARC welcomed the Union of Comoros as its 20th member and the United States of America as the sixth dialogue partner of the Association. At the meeting, member states pledged to support closer interaction between the Association and other regional organisations in the Indian Ocean such as the African Union. The members also reaffirmed the importance of maintaining freedom of navigation and safety and security of Sea Lanes of Communication in the Indian Ocean. The importance that trade facilitation measures have in the context of regional trade and investment expansion was noted. The importance of better preparedness to fight natural and other disasters in the maritime domain was also underscored. The member states also emphasised the need for building human connectivity by deepening cultural cooperation and promoting tourism in the region. The member states stressed on the role that the IOR-ARC troika can play in facilitating cooperation through regular interaction amongst its members.¹

Australia adds new amphibious ship to its fleet

Meanwhile, a new ship was added to the Australian navy with the first 'Landing Helicopter Dock Amphibious' ship arriving in the country. The 230 metre long ship will be able to carry more than a thousand people, 100 armoured vehicles, 12 helicopters and a 40-bed hospital.²

Australia keen on enhancing defence ties with India

Australia's Prime Minister Julia Gillard who visited India in October said that her country was keen on stepping up defence and security cooperation with India and expressed the desire to work together to protect vital sea routes in the Indo-Pacific region. The prime ministers of the two countries reaffirmed "the positive security and defence ties between both countries and committed to enhance maritime cooperation further, including through continued joint naval exercises".³

India emphasises role of Indian Navy in regional peace and stability

At the bi-annual Naval Commanders' Conference, India's defence minister, A K Antony underlined the key role of the Indian navy in India's engagement with countries of the Indian Ocean region. He said that India's strategic location and the professionalism of its navy places a responsibility on the country to play a 'more mature and stabilising role' in the region. The minister added that the Indian government is pursuing a string of proactive engagements with countries in the region to ensure peace and stability.⁴

Delivery of INS Vikramaditya delayed till 2013

India's second aircraft carrier, INS Vikramaditya being purchased from Russia for $ 2.3 billion is likely to be delivered only towards the end of 2013. Defence minister A K Antony expressed concerns over the delay and added that all agencies involved in the trials and deliveries must work overtime to deliver the ship as early as possible. India also plans to upgrade its largely Soviet-era military equipment and plans to buy stealth fighters, warships, nuclear-powered submarines and tanks from Russia.⁵

India and Indonesia to boost maritime security cooperation

In the first ministerial-level defence dialogue held in Jakarta, India and Indonesia agreed to enhance their cooperation on counter-terrorism as well as work together on security issues of the Indian Ocean. Encouraged by the first joint counter-terrorism and jungle warfare exercise held earlier this year, defence minister A K Antony stressed that the two sides should continue joint exercises between the two armies, and also indicated the possibility of joint naval exercises. He also exhorted Indonesia to set up an official maritime domain information sharing arrangement between India and Indonesian navies.⁶

Indonesian sailors shipwrecked in Trinidad and Tobago

Close to 163 Indonesians in the employment of a

Taiwanese fishing company have been stranded at sea off the Trinidad and Tobago coastline for months and the company officials are yet to take responsibility. The four Taiwanese fishing boats belong to a company which has reportedly been declared bankrupt. The Indonesian government has initiated procedures to rescue its nationals.⁷

Seychelles joins Combined Maritime Forces

Seychelles has become the newest member of the Combined Maritime Forces, a multi-national naval partnership which aims to promote a safe maritime environment. Seychelles has also taken a leading prosecutorial role in the region and would shortly be the host nation. It will share a managerial role in a new centre that would coordinate prosecutions and intelligence gathering on pirate activity for allied nations who are committed to eradicate such activities from the region.⁸

South Africa gets additional allocation for anti-piracy patrols

The South African National Defence Force secured an additional allocation of R63 million to cover the costs of increased anti-piracy patrols in the Mozambique Channel. South Africa has received numerous requests to assist in piracy operations after piracy began to move southwards from the waters off Somalia to those off Tanzania and Mozambique at the northern end of the channel. The South African navy has been maintaining an anti-piracy patrol in co-operation with the Mozambique Defence Force in the Mozambique Channel since early 2011 under Operation Copper.¹¹

Trilateral meeting on maritime security held in Sri Lanka

Sri Lanka hosted a high-level trilateral meeting on maritime security with India and the Maldives in Colombo. The meeting focused on a range of issues such as the sharing of information on shipping and tsunami warnings, and setting up of anti-piracy structures and coordination of joint Exclusive Economic Zone surveillance. Delegates also explored the possibility of oil spill response, maritime domain awareness training and joint naval and coast guard exercises. The meeting also discussed setting up of trilateral mechanisms to prevent illegal poaching.¹²

Dubai Maritime Week 2012 to be held in November

The Dubai Maritime City Authority (DMCA) has announced that the inaugural Dubai Maritime Week 2012 will be held between November 25 and 30 this year. The event is the first ever maritime event of its kind in the region and will be a forum for discussing the latest maritime issues and challenges with government officials, industry professionals, and operators and ship owners from across the region. It is part of the DMCA's efforts to leverage Dubai's position as a regional and global hub for trade and business and promote Dubai as a leading destination for companies working in areas including maritime transport management, offshore services, education and research, and ship repair and maintenance.¹³

ECONOMIC COOPERATION

Study reveals great potential for regional trade

A study on the trade and investment prospects of the IOR-ARC in the new millennium stated that the Association could consider setting up a joint task force to identify and address various non-tariff barriers affecting regional trade in the food processing industry. It added that the task force should promote cooperation between the standard setting bodies. The report also pointed out that firms in the region could cooperate in contracting and outsourcing in several sectors including agriculture, manufacturing and services for mutual benefit.¹⁵

India, largest importer in IOR-ARC

A study conducted by the Exim Bank of India revealed that India has overtaken Singapore to emerge as the largest importer in the Indian Ocean Rim-Association for Regional Cooperation (IOR-ARC) region. Of the total imports in the IOR-ARC region in 2010, India accounted for 18.8 per cent as compared to Singapore's share of 17.8 per cent. India's trade with countries in the region has increased eight-fold to $156.3 billion from $19 billion over the last decade.¹⁶

USAID helps the fisheries industry in Indonesia

The Indonesian Chamber of Commerce and Industry (Kadin) and US Agency for International Development (USAID) signed an MOU in Yogyakarta on October 2 to develop Indonesia's agriculture and fishery industries due to rising concerns over food security. The cooperation would enable USAID to empower Indonesian farmers by providing better credit access. The cooperation also aims to enhance Indonesia's 'blue' economy, in an effort to sustainably harness ocean and maritime resources. The agreement would also help in improving the competitiveness of workers and technology in both agriculture and fisheries.¹⁷

Malaysia is the world's 12th most business-friendly country: World Bank

According to a World Bank report, Malaysia has been ranked the 12th most business friendly country around the globe and comes out first in the category of easy procurement of credit. Malaysia has garnered this position for the first time ever since the World Bank and the International Finance Corporation began the process of compiling such rankings in 2005. The 'Doing Business 2013: Smarter Regulations for Small and Medium-Size Enterprises' report says that Malaysia stands fourth in the world when it comes to protecting investors. Malaysia was 23rd in 2010 and rose to the 18th spot this year, ahead of other affluent economies like Sweden (13th), Taiwan (16th), Germany (20th), Japan (24th) and Switzerland (28th).¹⁸

Potential for greater economic cooperation between Malaysia and India stressed

Speaking at the biennial Conference of the Commonwealth Association for Public Administration and Management, the chief secretary to the Malaysian government, Datuk Seri Dr Ali Hamsa said that the bilateral relationship between Malaysia and India can be strengthened further, especially in the realm of economics and tourism. He also noted that New Delhi and Kuala Lumpur can cooperate with each other by sharing their experiences in the development of cities.¹⁹

Malaysia aims to capture 2 per cent of global ship building industry by 2020

Malaysia is aiming to own two per cent of the global shipbuilding industry by 2020, up from one per cent in 2010, according to Tan Sri Ahmad Ramli Mohammad, the president and chairman of the Association of Marine Industries of Malaysia. In 2011, Malaysia garnered approximately RM7 billion in ship building and ship repair revenue. He stressed that there is a need to give a new impetus to this so called sunset industry, more so because Malaysia has the advantage of being located along the busy Straits of Malacca and also because its booming oil and gas operations employ many vessels. At present, there are over 80 active shipyards in Malaysia.²⁰

Oman invests $14bn in Sohar port, Sohar Free Zone expansion

Omani leaders are expected to present expansion plans for the country's northern port of Sohar at the Seatrade Middle East Maritime 2012 event to be held in Dubai from November 27-29 this year. Investments in the Sohar port expansion have exceeded $14 billion making it one of the largest port development projects in the world. The expansion project is a result of the Omani government's initiatives to capitalise on the country's strategic location and the potential economic windfall for business and employment opportunities in Oman. Oman has signed a number of agreements this year for the port and the free zone involving global players such as US Gypsum, GHIL and Algraposa, in order to boost cargo volumes and for local job creation.²¹

Seychelles signs visa exemption agreements with Sri Lanka and Mozambique

Seychelles has signed two new visa exemption agreements with Sri Lanka and Mozambique. Seychelles foreign affairs minister, Jean Paul Adam said that the two agreements will further promote friendly relations, trade and economic development between Seychelles and Mozambique, as well as between Seychelles and Sri Lanka. Once the formalities are complete the citizens of Seychelles will be able to enter and stay without a visa in Mozambique and Sri Lanka for a period not exceeding 30 days.²²

ENVIRONMENTAL CONCERNS/ DISASTER RISK MANAGEMENT

Australian scientists find effective way to tackle reef-killing starfish

An Australian research team has found an effective way to kill the destructive crown-of-thorns starfish that is devastating coral reefs across the Pacific and Indian oceans. They have developed a culture that infects the starfish and destroys them in 24 hours. However, it is yet to be tested whether it is safe for other marine life, particularly fish. Other fresh crown-of-thorns outbreaks were reported from Guam, French Polynesia, Papua New Guinea and the central Indian Ocean.³¹

The Conference is the first gathering of Asian ministers to consider a successor to the world's first comprehensive agreement on disaster risk reduction, the 'Hyogo Framework for Action (2005-2015): Building the Resilience of Nations and Communities to Disasters,' which came into effect after the 2004 Asian tsunami. The Conference discussed how to scale up action at local level and the nature of a new post-2015 agreement based on the region's experience to date. The conference was co-organised by the UN Office for Disaster Risk Reduction and the Indonesian National Board for Disaster Management.³³

Mozambican town threatened by erosion

Several buildings in the town of Moma, in the northern Mozambican province of Nampula, are in danger of collapse due to coastal erosion. Among the buildings at risk are the offices of the Moma district government and the residence of the district administrator, as well as homes of citizens. A team consisting of staff from the National Disaster Management Institute and from the Nampula Provincial Environmental and Public Works Directorates has been sent to Moma to study the situation. The team has called for urgent corrective measures, before buildings are actually swept away. About $ 52,000 have been made available to minimise the problem in Moma.
