The festival of Eid in Gilgit Baltistan was marred by grief and shock over the killings of 19 innocent people in Mansehra on August 16. These people travelling in buses were on their way to Gilgit from Rawalpindi. According to reports, the victims were Shias and they were forced to disembark from the buses before being shot dead. They were identified as belonging to a particular sect from their identity cards before the assailants dressed in military fatigue killed them mercilessly. The attack appears pre planned as it occurred during the holy month of Ramzan when people travel back to their hometowns for celebrating the festival. The government of Pakistan ordered probe and few arrests had been made, as reports claim. However, the real culprits are far from being apprehended and the government has once again resorted to the Jirgas for helping maintain peace and order in the region. It raises serious questions on the administration's intention to secure the lives of the innocent people who have been targeted incessantly due to their religious affiliation.

The incident is a grim reminder of the attacks on Shias in February and April earlier this year. The modus operandi was similar to the previous attacks. The sequential unfolding of the events is absolutely similar to what is in the earlier incidents when the government and the administrative machinery was caught napping. The claims of certain arrests being made, involving Jirgas in help restoring order, statements regarding launching operations in the region to arrests trouble makers and ultimately making no headway: all this bears striking resemblance to the earlier incidents of target killings in Gilgit Baltistan.

The controversial Diamer Bhasha dam project is mired in huge financial difficulties due to unwillingness of the donor agencies to fund a project which is located in a disputed region. Pakistan is exploring other options to finance the ambitious project and it seems to have pinned its hope entirely on China. Notably, China is already funding a huge number of infrastructural and hydro power projects in the PoK region.

Nisar Ahmad Khan, 19 pulled out of buses, shot dead in sectarian attack

Dawn, August 17, 2012

MANSEHRA: Terrorists ambushed four buses, pulled out the passengers and shot at least 19 of them dead in the Babusar Top area of Mansehra district on August 16. Before killing the passengers, the assailants had checked their identity cards and shot them because they were Shia. "More than 50 terrorists wearing commando uniform intercepted a convoy going from Rawalpindi to Gilgit-Baltistan before 7am, hauled off passengers from four vans, identified them through their national identity cards and shot 19 of them dead," District Coordination Officer Dr Amber Ali Khan stated. He noted several CNICs had been found at the place in the mountain range where the attack had taken place.

G-B massacre: When will Pakistan really win independence?

The Express Tribune, August 17, 2012

Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) is a natural splendour which

Pakistan boasts as a tourist attraction for foreigners and expats. This mountainous terrain is adorned with snow capped peaks, lush valleys and rivers that could revitalise your very soul. This place was heaven on earth; this place exists no more.

G-B, which once stood as the most appealing attraction for tourists now stands amongst one of the most neglected regions of the world. Eaten away by sectarianism, extremism and militancy, our lush valleys of the North are embedded with fear and vulnerability. The presence of militant factions and clashes between rival sects has become the causal route for disruption and disarray. Militant intrusion has led to civil war and carnage amongst the once peaceful people of G-B and continues to plague the people even today.

Joint Investigation Team set up on Lalosar Carnage

Dardistan Times, August 17, 2012

GILGIT: A joint investigation team has been setup to probe into the heinous act of terrorism in Lalosar region of Mansehra District of Pakistan where 19 people were killed. SSP Investigations, Ilyas Khan will be leading the investigation team.

As per details, the team will dissect records of prisoners in jail who have been involved in sectarian killings. Reports claimed that 6 prisoners from Gilgit jail who were involved in attacks on Shia community have been shifted to unknown locations for extensive investigation. The Investigation Team will probe prisoners in the jails of Gilgit-Baltistan, Peshwar and Mansehra in order to detect any possible links with the attack.

Civil society condemns target killing of 22 people

The News, August 18, 2012

ISLAMABAD: Civil society activists gathered in front of National Press Club to condemn the target killing of 22 innocent people because of their religious faith when they were on their way to Gilgit-Baltistan. The protestors chanted slogans against the target killing on the basis of religion and sect and demanded the government to provide protection to Shia community. They urged the government to immediately arrest the perpetrators or otherwise resign. They stated that hundreds of people belonging to Gilgit-Baltistan are forced to spend Eid in Islamabad as they do not feel secure to travel on the only road leading to their native areas.

Grief, Panic, Protests- Gilgit Baltistan begs for attention

Dardistan Times, August 17, 2012

Complete shutter down strike observed in parts of Gilgit-Baltistan. Protest rallies were held across Gilgit Baltistan against the heinous Loluser carnage. Ten people including two DSPs, Ghulam Nabi and Iftikhar, were injured when a group of unknown persons attacked the rally in Khaplu. The attackers threw stones on the participants and ran away. Eye witnesses stated that the rally was on its way peacefully when suddenly a group appeared and started pelting stones on the throng, causing panic among the protesters. Police immediately fired shells of tear gas to control the situation and as result of police action attackers ran away from the scene.

Parts of Gilgit-Baltistan shut down to protest Shia killings

The Express Tribune, August 17, 2012

SKARDU: A second day of complete shutter-down was observed in certain areas of Gilgit-Baltistan, with demonstrations and rallies being held in different areas in protest of the killing of 25 people by terrorists. Following protests and a call by Shia clerics of Anjuman-e-Imamia Baltistan against the delay in the arrest of the perpetrators, the local government also announced three days of mourning, with educational institutions and offices being closed for the period.

In aid of Gilgit-Baltistan Khurram Husain

The Express Tribune, July 30, 2012

The brutal sectarian murder that took place near Babuser Pass may not sound like much of an economic story to most people, but it is of such universal importance that it would be naïve to think that economic matters are divorced from the steady descent of our country into a boiling cauldron of primitive hatreds. However, the human tragedy that the killings represent is the first order of priority to highlight. There are only two overland linkages that the erstwhile Northern Areas have with the rest of Pakistan, and both of them have seen brutal sectarian murders.

COAS visits forward locations in Gilgit Baltistan to celebrate Eid with troops

Associated Press of Pakistan, August 23, 2012

ISLAMABAD: Chief of Army Staff (COAS), General Ashfaq Parvez Kayani, visited forward locations in Gilgit-Baltistan on August 22 to celebrate Eid with troops. According to an ISPR press release, COAS visited Gayari to meet troops busy in the recovery operation. The operation started as a relief and rescue effort, immediately after the disastrous avalanche that caused Shahadat of 140 soldiers and civilians. It has continued without any let off for the last four and a half months despite severe terrain and climatic conditions. COAS lauded the perseverance and motivation of troops involved in the rescue effort which has resulted in the recovery of 79 bodies to date.

Shabbir Mir, 'Undeclared curfew' imposed in Gilgit

The Express Tribune, August 22, 2012

GILGIT: All entry and exit routes were sealed and markets closed on August 22 after three people were killed and two others were injured a day earlier in a fresh wave of sectarian violence that erupted in reaction to the Naran bus attack. “The step has been taken to overcome target killings,” Ali Sher, a senior police official noted. “This is understandably a reaction to the Naran bus killings,” he stated of the violence that left three people dead and two others seriously wounded in different incidents of target killings in Gilgit on August 21. The recent incidents came four days after 19 passengers, mostly Shias, were shot dead by terrorists at point blank range in the Mansehra district.

Hussain Abbas, Emergency declared in Gilgit

Pakistan Today, August 22, 2012

LAHORE: Police and law enforcement agencies have blocked entry and exit routes to Gilgit amid tense law and order situation following Shiite killings in Babuser, a resident noted.

The local administration has declared emergency and gatherings of more than three people are banned in the area. Three people including Frontier Corps official were killed August 21 evening in an incident of firing near Sakwar area of Gilgit. Rangers, local police and army have been deployed and are continuously patrolling the city to deal with any unfortunate incident. It is pertinent to mention that the Shiite killings on Rawalpindi-Gilgit route has sparked clashes three times claiming hundreds of lives in Gilgit.

Shabir Choudhry, Are Muslims safe in Pakistan and Gilgit Baltistan?

August 21, 2012

Despite what is happening to Muslims in Pakistan, many people still regard Islamic Republic of Pakistan as a 'Fort of Islam'. When this 'Fort of Islam' was established in 1947 after division of the British India on religious lines, it resulted in death of around one million of innocent people and many millions were uprooted, as there was no planned transfer of people from one country to another. The 'fort of Islam' Pakistan was supposed to provide protection, self respect, economic prosperity and dignity to its citizens.

Naran massacre: In Gilgit, fear mars Eid preparations

The Express Tribune, August 20, 2012

GILGIT: Residents of Gilgit are gripped in fear and forced to remain indoors following the carnage of 19 Shia passengers in Naran valley of Mansehra district. The ruthless killing overshadowed Eid preparation in the town that is still in a state of shock. Roads and markets in Gilgit were deserted in fear of violence since August 17, a day after the passengers were hauled off from four buses heading from Rawalpindi to Gilgit by Tehrik-i-Taliban Pakistan (TTP) terrorists and shot dead. The incident, which is the third in the last six months, is stated to have broken the fragile peace in the region.

Jon Boone, Post-massacre, Pakistan army flights help Shia exodus

Hindustan Times, August 19, 2012

ISLAMABAD: A series of sectarian massacres on one of Pakistan's most important roads has forced the government to lay on military flights for Shias travelling to and from the country's capital. The decision to allocate C-130 Hercules transport planes for the use of civilians travelling between Islamabad and the north-eastern provincial capital of Gilgit follows the killing on August 16 of 20 Shias.

In the third such incident on the road in six months, the victims were pulled off a bus some 100 miles north of Islamabad by armed men, lined up and shot.

'Govt committed to early completion of Bhasha dam'

Dawn, August 20, 2012

LAHORE: The PPP government is committed to early completion of the Diamer-Bhasha Dam, which can generate 4,500MW of cheap hydel electricity and provide over six million acre feet of water for agriculture. In a statement issued here, central leader of the PPP Munir Ahmad Khan stated that dam would be completed with or without foreign funding. Precisely for this reason, the PPP had the project approved from the ECNEC in 2009.

It has already started earmarking money for it, and started acquiring land for the project. The PC-I for the by-pass road, which is prerequisite for the dam construction, has already been approved at a cost of Rs3.8 billion. On the recommendation of the lenders, the PPP government got the project approved by the Council of Common Interest (CCI) and also from the Central Development Work party (CDWP). On top of it all, the prime minister performed ground breaking of the project on October 18, 2011, Khan stated.

Aziz Ali Dad, Death wish...Untimely meditations

The News, August 18, 2012

As I write this column it is being reported in the media that 25 passengers were hauled up from buses near the fringes of Babusar Pass and brutally murdered after their identification. From all the signs it appears to be killing on sectarian grounds. The scourge of sectarianism in the multi-religious society of Gilgit-Baltistan is eroding the social and moral fabric of society. Without the moral bedrock, society loses its sense of direction and plunges into abyss of nihilism. The yawning abyss between communities and the fire of sectarian violence is devouring all the communities in the area, but they are under the illusion that the opponents are consumed by fire that is divinely lit.

Pak alerts foreign diplomats on Eid violence

The Indian Express, August 19, 2012

ISLAMABAD: Fearing terror attacks, Pakistan imposed travel ban on foreign diplomats while Interior Minister Rehman Malik has called for strict vigil at diplomatic missions during the Eid-ul-Fitr holidays to avert any possible incident of terrorism, including suicide attacks. The federal government imposed the ban on travel by foreign diplomats within the country without seeking prior permission. Diplomats will have to seek permission from the Foreign Ministry before any travel, sources in the Interior Ministry noted. Following advice from the Interior Ministry, diplomats in Islamabad were asked not to visit Quetta and Gilgit-Baltistan.

Altaf demands end to killings over religious affiliations

The News, August 27, 2012

Muttahida Qaumi Movement (MQM) chief Altaf Hussain stated that it is his foremost effort to stop the killing of innocent people based on religious beliefs and persuasion. In a statement released on August 25, he stated that he was raising his voice for ending hatred and prejudices, and he would continue to do so without any fear of repercussions. Hussain stated that he was against the killing of innocent people due to any reason. "The blood of innocent people belonging to a particular community must not be spilled." The MQM founder told Agha Rahat that he shared the grief of the innocent people slaughtered in Gilgit-Baltistan.

Sectarian unrest: Kohistan jirga offers help to restore peace in Gilgit-Baltistan

The Express Tribune, August 25, 2012

ABBOTABAD: Tribal elders and clerics in Kohistan have offered mediation between rival sects in Gilgit-Baltistan to ease mounting tension and restore peace in the volatile region. The offer was made on August 24 during a meeting between a jirga and the district coordination officer (DCO), Aqil Badshah, in Kohistan. The jirga, comprising tribal elders and clerics, denounced the killing of 19 Shia passengers near Babusar Top in Kaghan valley earlier this month. The grisly massacre in Hazara division was aimed at maligning the local populace, they stated.

Sectarian bloodletting

The Nation, August 26, 2012

Recent attack on the Kamra Airbase attack, and the brutal killing of 22 Shia passengers, who were on their way to Astore, Gilgit Baltistan, to celebrate Eid must be condemned strongly. Both these acts of terrorism aimed at destabilising Pakistan. Particularly, the genocide of Shia Muslims has been a norm in Pakistan, especially since the last few years. Besides, the state has failed to provide security to its people. Shia Muslims of Hazara community in Balochistan province and passengers of Gilgit Baltistan are being targeted after verifying their identities. Where are the security forces? The two main schools of thought, Shias and Sunnis, had been living peacefully in these regions since eons. However, the long-lasting peace was destroyed by the fundamentalist approach of military dictator Zia-ul-Haq. Prima facie, it appears that there is a non-ending clash between the two rival groups. But behind the scene, a big plan is being prepared by the masterminds of this game who have vested interests.

Ulema's help sought to maintain peace in GB

Dawn, August 26, 2012

SKARDU: Chief Minister Gilgit-Baltistan Syed Mehdi Shah has stated that enduring peace is crucial for the development of the region. And to maintain peace and harmony among people belonging to various schools of thought in the region, ulema should play their role and cooperate with the government, he stressed.

He was addressing the 27th annual convention of Baltistan Students Federation (BSF). Mr Shah stated some elements didn't want better relations between Pakistan and its neighbouring countries like China and Iran. That is why these elements were encouraging terrorism, fundamentalism and sectarianism, endangering sovereignty and integrity of the country, he added. He called for countering the conspiracies through wisdom instead of getting emotional.

Pakistani Shi'as are 'victims of regional politics'

August 24, 2012

Pakistani development experts and activists say the massacre of Shia Muslims in Gilgit-Baltistan and other northern parts of Pakistan is linked to ongoing development programs in the area and regional politics. Last week, several gunmen, who were in the guise of Pakistani security officials, stopped a passenger bus travelling from Rawalpindi to the northwestern Gilgit region and dragged the travelers off the bus. The gunmen asked the passengers to show their identity cards, after which they brutally killed 22 of them at point blank range, making sure that they belonged to the minority Shia community. The Taliban, a Sunni-Wahabi militant organization, claimed responsibility of the attack.

Iftikhar A. Khan, AJK political parties agree to amend 1974 constitution

Dawn, August 31, 2012

ISLAMABAD: Almost all the political parties of Azad Kashmir agreed on August 30 that the interim AJK constitution of 1974 should be suitably amended, and discussed various proposals regarding the move. While briefing reporters after chairing an all-party conference that brought together the top political leadership of Azad Kashmir, Federal Minister for Kashmir Affairs Mian Manzoor Ahmad Wattoo stated the AJK constitution could be amended with a simple majority in two houses including the AJK Legislative Assembly and AJK Council.

He stated the PPP, despite enjoying a simple majority in both the houses, has decided to bring amendments while taking all other political parties on board. He added that all decisions will be taken with a consensus so as to bring positive change to the lives of the people of Azad Jammu and Kashmir and to give them more rights.

Pakistani atlas shows PoK as Indian

Hindustan Times, August 30, 2012

A new school atlas published by the government of Pakistan's Punjab province has shown Pakistan-occupied Kashmir and the Gilgit-Baltistan region as Indian territories. The education authorities rushed to recall the atlas from all elementary and high school libraries of Punjab province, which has a population of 90 million.

The government of chief minister Shahbaz Sharif has had to face criticism from academicians over the development. "It is a grave mistake that speaks of the inefficiency of our chief minister's team," publisher Khalid Pervez stated. Over 15,000 copies of the atlas had been delivered to school libraries so far. The education department stated it would take action against all those responsible for printing, approving and distributing the atlas. The publisher had been asked to reprint the atlas with correct maps, it stated.

PML-N condemns sectarian killings

Daily Times, August 28, 2012

ISLAMABAD: Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz (PML-N) leader Marvi Memon on August 27 condemned target and sectarian killings across the country, saying it was aimed at destabilising the country and crippling the national economy. Addressing a press conference, she stated the federal, Sindh, Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, Balochistan and Gilgit-Baltistan governments were equally responsible for the failure of law and order. Accompanied by PML-N Gilgit-Baltistan Coordinator Siddiqui Farooq and Central Media Coordinator Asim Khan, she stated that the Punjab chief minister had announced an education package for the children of victim families.

Zofeen Ebrahim, "If this isn't Shia genocide, what is?"

Dawn, August 27, 2012

"It must have been early morning when about two dozen masked men, in army uniforms, stopped their convoy of buses. All passengers were asked to get down. In an organised manner they separated the Shias from among the rest and having ascertained their identity (through their names and the area they belonged to), shot them dead," stated Hussain (real name withheld on request), who belongs to a village in the Astore district of Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B). Twenty-four people (21 Shias and three Sunnis) in aboard three buses, who had embarked on fateful that August 15 morning, from Rawalpindi, never reached their destination in G-B (a Shia-majority region), after their buses were intercepted near Lulusar area in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa (KP) province on August 16, where they were mercilessly massacred.

Altaf Hussain condemns killings of people at Babusar Top near Gilgit

Business Recorder, August 16, 2012

LONDON: Muttahida Quami Movement MQM leader Altaf Hussain strongly condemned killing of people at Babusar Top near Gilgit on August 16 after being pulled out from three passenger buses by armed terrorists. He stated gunning down of innocent people belonging to a particular segment of society in the country after ascertaining their identities was blatant terrorism. Elements involved in killing innocent people for their vicious designs were not worthy of being called humans let alone Muslims.

Pakistan Shias killed in Gilgit sectarian attack

BBC, August 16, 2012

Pakistan's Shias have accused the government of doing too little to stop attacks against them. As many as 25 Shia Muslims have been forced out of a bus and killed in a sectarian attack in northern Pakistan, officials have told the BBC. The killings took place in a remote and mountainous area about 160km (100 miles) north of the capital Islamabad as the bus was travelling from the city of Rawalpindi to the city of Gilgit. Sectarian violence has killed hundreds of Pakistanis in recent years. Most attacks are in the Northern Areas and in Balochistan province. Police told the BBC that those killed in the latest attack were travelling on three buses for the forthcoming Muslim festival of Eid in the district of Mansehra. They were either shot or bludgeoned to death.

Risky development: Hydropower project leaves thousands in search of water

The Express Tribune, August 13, 2012

MIRPUR: Political leaders and environmentalists have expressed concern over the drying up of water springs as a result of boring of two tunnels for a power project in Neelum-Jhelum valley. "At least 600 water springs have vanished as a result of boring of the tunnels," stated Leader of the Opposition in Azad Kashmir (AJK) Legislative Assembly, Farooq Haider Khan, while talking to media persons. The drying up of water springs has deprived several villages of natural drinking water, he stated, adding that the direction of underground water has also changed as a result. Khan was of the view that before initiating the project, it should have been debated in the assembly and its impact on the environment and people's lives assessed.

Human Rights abuses continue unabated in Pak administered Kashmir

MUZFARRABAD: A human rights group in Pakistan administrated Kashmir (PAK) expressed concern over growing incidents of human rights violations, mainly attacks on journalists. We are concerned over deteriorating situation of human rights and freedom of the press in AJK (PAK) as violence against women, monitories and press has increased since last few months, Press for Peace (PFP) stated in a statement. Yousaf Kashmiri an official of PFP that works for the promotion of human development and sustainable peace, gave details of some incidents in which local media persons were attacked by different groups or arrested and government authorities could not take action against the culprits.

Zafar Iqbal, Muzaffarabad Demands Empowerment from Islamabad

August 9, 2012

This week Pakistani Prime Minister received a startling welcome from people of Pakistan-Administrated Kashmir (PAK) with growing demand of transfer of more constitutional, executive and economic clout from Islamabad to Muzaffarabad. Pakistani premier Raja Pervez Ashraf visited Muzaffarabad to inaugurate two tunnel-boring machines in a controversial 969MW Neelum Jhelum Hydroelectric Project (NJHP) being constructed by a Chinese firm. Pakistan and India are fighting a legal battle at the International Court of Arbitration (ICA) over the construction of the NJHP. The court will hold its final hearing next week at Hague and is expected to pronounce its verdict by the end of this year. This gives Pakistan an opportunity to accelerate its work on the NJHP.

Seminar: Call for constitutional reforms in AJK

The Express Tribune, August 4, 2012

MIRPUR: Since the status of Azad Jammu and Kashmir (AJK) Council in the light of UN resolutions is questionable, there is need to introduce reforms in AJK. For this reason, necessary amendments should be introduced in the interim constitution of AJK, keeping in view the demands of civil society, politicians and members of the AJK Legislative Assembly. This was discussed at a seminar with Justice (retd) Abdul Majeed Malik in chair on August 2. Malik observed that Pakistan has maintained its stance under the constitutions of 1956, 1962 and 1973 that the Jammu and Kashmir state is not part of Pakistan. Thus its future status is yet to be determined by the people of the state.

Javid Hayat, Shadow governance: right to vote and rule in AJK

Daily Times, August 2, 2012

The history of the AJK indicates that the right to vote and the existing basic governance structure was a result of political parties putting up an incredibly hard-fought struggle. Politics and power distribution in Azad Jammu and Kashmir (AJK) is conditioned by three main factors. Firstly, it is driven by the Kashmir conflict at large, which resulted in the AJK acquiring a disputed status that further led to interim arrangements and uncertainty. Secondly, becoming a de facto federal unit of the state of Pakistan has sidelined it from the mainstream, which, in turn, created 'systematic' dependency in almost all spheres of political, economic and societal life. Thirdly, at the internal level, ethnicity or cross-cutting cleavages based on tribes (biradri) and regional divisions play a significant part in the political shaping and reshaping.

Mushtaq Ghumman, Financial constraints: Govt likely to shelve Diamer-Bhasha dam

Business Recorder, August 18, 2012

ISLAMABAD: The government is likely to shelve high priority Diamer-Bhasha dam at least for the time being due to uncertain financial assistance from international financial institutions and Friends of Democratic Pakistan (FoDP) including Japan and will commence civil work on the project by utilising its own resources as well as establish power house as Independent Power Producer (IPP), sources noted.

World Bank and Asian Development Bank (ADB) have already conveyed diplomatically 'no financing' to the multi-purpose dollars 12 billion project, which will also generate 4500MW electricity at very cheap rates.

Donors to set aside Indian pressure over Diamer Bhasha dam: PEW

August 29, 2012

ISLAMABAD: The Pakistan Economy Watch (PEW) has urged multilateral donors to set aside the pressure of India and extend financing for the Diamer Bhasha dam that could prove a source of overcoming energy crisis in Pakistan. In a statement issued on August 28, President Pakistan Economy Watch Dr. Murtaza Mughal stated multilateral donors including World Bank (WB) and Asian Development Bank (ADB) have refused to extend financing for the Diamer Bhasha dam under influence of India but donors must set aside the pressure of India and extend financing for the dam. "The donors should not become part of controversy between two countries over water rights and should extend financing for the strategically important water and power project that would become a backbone of Pakistan's economy," he added.

Zafar Bhutta, Cold feet: Setbacks in Diemer-Bhasha funding

The Express Tribune, August 3, 2012

ISLAMABAD: In a major setback for the $11.5 billion Diemer-Bhasha Dam project, all foreign lenders have expressed reluctance to provide finances and have, instead, offered to fund the 4,320-megawatt Dasu hydropower project. According to reports, the Indian lobby in Washington is vigorously working against the funding of the Diemer-Bhasha Dam, forcing the US and other donors to link its assistance for the Pakistani project with a No Objection Certificate (NoC) from New Delhi given India's claims that the Dam is located in the disputed territory of Gilgit-Baltistan. Washington had earlier agreed to fund the project on the condition of approval from the US Congress. The World Bank, on the other hand, already refused to extend finances for the Diemer-Bhasha Dam, linking the financing of the multi-billion dollar project with Indian concurrence.

Shahbaz Rana, Diamer Bhasha dam: Japanese aid keeps plans afloat

The Express Tribune, August 31, 2012

ISLAMABAD: Japan has agreed in principle to finance the power houses of the Diamer Bhasha dam, renewing hopes that the project will not be suspended. The dam has been designed to generate 4,500 megawatts of electricity, which Pakistan direly needs, besides storing water for agriculture purposes.

According to a senior government official, Japan has agreed to finance the construction of the power houses of the dam through the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA). He stated the move, if it materialises, will create a win-win situation for both parties: it will provide much-needed funding for the project and an opportunity to JICA to sell its equipment. However, the exact amount of the funding has not yet been worked out as modalities will be finalised later on, the official added. Meanwhile, the authorities have informed the premier about this development.
