POLITICAL DEVELOPMENTS

NATIONAL POLITICS

Imran warns of bloody revolution, The Express Tribune, July 2<sup>1</sup>

Terming the 2013 general elections 'the most controversial', Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) Chairman Imran Khan said on Wednesday that when governments can't be changed through the ballot, then the only option left is a 'bloody revolution' or 'martial law'. [...]He said 22 political parties had put a question mark on the 2013 elections and the arguments of the Pakistan Peoples' Party (PPP) had endorsed PTI's point of view about rigging in the polls. "The ruling Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz (PML-N) had printed millions of additional ballot papers with the help of the Election Commission of Pakistan (ECP) to alter the election results."

Inclusive development top priority, says Ahsan Iqbal, Daily Times, July 3<sup>2</sup>

[...]Ahsan Iqbal on July 2 said that ensuring united and strong Pakistan through shared prosperity and inclusive development is the top priority of the government. "The China Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC) will bring dividends to all the provinces and regions of the country, and would strengthen the federation through equal development," he said. [...] He pointed out that Gwadar would be connected to Khunjerab through multiple routes as the port would serve different markets and destinations across the region. He said that the western alignment of the CPEC is the first and foremost priority of the government, which would be operational by December 2016. Three different routes include: route 1 from Gwadar-Quetta-Zhob-DI Khan-Islamabad to Khunjerab; route 2 from Gwadar-Sukkur-Indus Highway to Khunjerab; and route 3 from Gwadar-Sukkur-Karachi Peshawar Motorway to Khunjerab.

Dar rejects proposal to privatise Neelum-Jhelum project, The Dawn, July 7<sup>3</sup>

On July 6, Finance Minister Ishaq Dar rejected proposals for privatisation of the Neelum-Jhelum hydropower project to meet a financing gap caused by an escalation of its cost by 52 per cent. Informed sources said the cost of the 969MW strategic project had risen to Rs 418 billion from Rs274bn approved at the fag-end of the PPP government. A revised PC-1 finalised with fresh cost estimates is awaiting clearance by the Central Development Working Party and the Executive Committee of National Economic Council. [...] After completion, the project is estimated to produce more than Rs45bn worth of “cheaper and cleaner” energy every year and contribute over Rs5bn annually to the Azad Kashmir government. It will also improve Wapda’s financial position and replace some of the expensive thermal projects being run on imported furnace oil. The project located near Muzaffarabad in Azad Kashmir envisages diversion of water from the Neelum river through a 42km tunnel underneath the Jhelum river.

NAB submits 150 mega corruption cases to SC, The Nation, July 8<sup>4</sup>

National Accountability Bureau (NAB) on July 7 submitted before the Supreme Court of Pakistan a report of 150 mega corruption cases, involving high-profile figures like Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif, his brother and Punjab Chief Minister Shahbaz Sharif, former premiers, ministers and top bureaucrats. ....The document shows that NAB is conducting an inquiry against the Sharifs for building a road at the cost of Rs 126 million in the suburbs of Lahore to facilitate traffic to their sprawling Raiwind estate where the ruling family resides. [...]The report reveals that former president Asif Ali Zardari is facing probes for corruption of billions of rupees and for having assets beyond resources. Former premiers Chaudhry Shujaat Hussain and Raja Pervaiz Ashraf are also facing probes. Former prime minister Raja Pervaiz Ashraf is being scrutinised for the rental power plants (RPP) case. The NAB list shows the incumbent finance minister Ishaq Dar is also being investigated for corruption. Some other prominent persons under investigation include former ambassador to US Hussain Haqqani, former interior minister Aftab Khan Sherpao and former Balochistan chief minister Nawab Aslam Raisani.

During the past three decades, a total of eleven elected prime ministers ruled the country.....While Junejo and Benazir are no more in this world, and Shaukat Aziz left the country shortly after completing his term, all other prime ministers, except Balochistan’s Jamali, are facing NAB cases. [...]

To set the record right, Mr Junejo was an honest leader.....and the name of Benazir Bhutto has not been mentioned in the list of mega corruption cases because she died while Swiss money cases were still pending. Now, it is Mr Asif Ali Zardari who is a party in those cases. ...But what is...regrettable is the failure of the NAB to take the pending cases to their logical conclusion. Had the apex court not really forced it, the NAB would not have presented the list. The performance of the NAB is simply disappointing. Corruption is widespread in society but the NAB doesn't seem very active to deal with the corrupt. It is perhaps for this reason that the NAB is taken to mean "No Action Bureau".

Afghan peace talks justify my stand: Imran, The Dawn, July 9<sup>6</sup>

Afghan peace talks have provided PTI chief Imran Khan a chance to defend his stance on talks with Tehreek-i-Taliban Pakistan (TTP). [...] Going to his twitter handle the PTI chairman shared his thoughts with his over 2.6 million followers, saying, "Ironic how I was attacked for suggesting peace talks & now Pak is hosting, with US approval, talks between Afghan govt & Taliban in Pak."

NAB submits list of mega corruption cases before SC, The Dawn, July 13<sup>7</sup>

On July 13, the National Accountability Bureau (NAB) submitted a modified report on 150 mega corruption cases before the Supreme Court of Pakistan (SC). Earlier on July 7, NAB officials had submitted a list before the SC as per the court's directives. [...] However, the court had expressed dissatisfaction over the report and had asked NAB to include two additional columns in the report for further details. .... Interestingly, the NAB record lacks the details of cases against some top figures, including Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif, Shahbaz Sharif, former president Asif Ali Zardari and former Pakistani envoy to the US Hussain Haqqani.

Govt fails to activate PPO courts, The Nation, July 15<sup>8</sup>

An official of the Ministry of Law told The Nation on July 14, that the Protection of Pakistan Ordinance (PPO) which has been promulgated to defeat the menace of terrorism and establish protection and peace in the country is not working. The seriousness of the government authorities can easily be assessed from the working of a PPO court in Lahore which has not heard even a single case since its establishment.

JuD raps govt for 'annoying' Kashmiri leaders, The Dawn, July 16<sup>9</sup>

The Jamaat-ud-Dawa has criticised Islamabad for what it called annoying Kashmiri leadership to appease New Delhi. Abdur Rehman Makki told an iftar dinner here on Wednesday that the government was losing trust of the Kashmiri leadership and damaging the freedom movement by taking one-sided steps for building friendship with India and resorting to back-channel

Thousands arrested in Zarb-e-Azb: Fatemi, The News, July 24<sup>10</sup>

Special Assistant to the Prime Minister on Foreign Affairs, Tariq Fatemi has said that thousands of terrorists had been arrested in operation Zarb-e-Azb and they will be brought to justice soon. In his address at Heritage Foundation, USA, Fatemi said, “Over 190,000 Pakistan military personnel are taking part in Zarb-e-Azb, launched 13 months ago.” Pakistan has cleared Shawal area near Pak-Afghan border, he maintained. Fatemi lauded the efforts of Afghan President Ashraf Ghani, saying that he was playing effective role to restore peace.

PM forms panel to review criminal laws, The Express Tribune, July 31<sup>11</sup>

In an attempt to improve the justice system, Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif constituted a committee of nine jurists to review the criminal laws of the country. The ministry of law, justice and human rights divisions, in a statement, revealed that the committee has been asked to present its recommendations within six months. [...]According to the notification, Attorney General for Pakistan Salman Aslam Butt will be heading the committee while the other members include PBC Vice Chairman Azam Nazeer Tarar, Supreme Court Bar Association president Fazl-e-Haq Abbasi, former SCBA president Kamran Murtaza, former SCBA president Asma Jahangir, Rasheed A Rizvi advocate, Muhammad Akram Quraishi, Khawaja Haris Ahmad and Abdul Lateef Afridi. PBC’s secretary will act as secretary of the committee.

ECP orders parties to submit asset details, The Express Tribune, July 27<sup>12</sup>

The Election Commission of Pakistan (ECP) has requested all political parties to submit details of their assets latest by August 29, 2015. Under the Article of the Political Parties Order 2002, all the political parties in the country are required to submit a consolidated statement of accounts of the party duly audited by a Chartered Accountant within 60 days of close of the financial year. Along with a financial statement, parties are also required to submit a certificate signed by the party leader stating that the party did not receive any funding from sources, which is prohibited under the Political Parties Order, 2002. Any party failing to submit its statement of accounts under Article 13

Defence secretary, ISI chief issued notices, The Dawn, July 7<sup>13</sup>

Islamabad High Court (IHC) Justice Shaukat Aziz Siddiqui, hearing a petition seeking recovery of a lawyer who went missing along with an accused in FIA's prosecutor murder case, observed that the court order issued on July 3, 2015 summoning secretary defence and ISI representative in the case was not complied with. The court then directed the DG ISI to depute an officer of director or above rank to brief and assist the court in the matter. But neither the representative of ISI nor secretary defence appeared before the court. The judge remarked that he could issue contempt of court notices for secretary defence.....The lawyer Hammad Dadan went missing on June 20 while he was with his cousin Abdullah Umar and Ammar Dadan.

NCHR wants its observer in military courts, The Express Tribune, July 23<sup>14</sup>

National Commission on Human Rights (NCHR) Chairman Justice (ret'd) Ali Nawaz Chowhan has desired that an observer from the commission should be allowed to review proceedings of the military courts, recently formed to try hardcore terrorists. "This commission should be allowed to have an observer there at the military courts," said Justice Chowhan, who has recently assumed office of the powerful commission.....Justice Chowhan observed that the issue of missing persons could be solved through political means. "Though I'm still studying this issue, my personal opinion is that all people held during insurgency either by intelligence agencies or the military should be reported. The agencies should detain a person only on the basis of solid evidence," he said. "Agencies should report the missing person's case in the court of law," he added.

JUDICIAL COMMISSION REPORT

Aitzaz says 2013 polls can be declared unfair, The Express Tribune, July 2<sup>15</sup>

PPP's counsel Aitzaz Ahsan said on July 1, that the 2013 parliamentary elections could be declared unfair on the basis of missing Form 15s from polling bags. [...]Ahsan submitted that the 2013 election records have been tampered with and its evidence has been presented before the inquiry commission. "Form 15 is a very sacred document. Punjab pattern of electoral rigging had been used in the last general elections."

It was '70 punctures' and not 35: Imran Khan, Daily Times, July 5<sup>16</sup>

Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) Chairman, Imran Khan on July 5 said '35 punctures' is only a tip of the iceberg as it has now come to everyone's knowledge that much worse took place in the general elections of 2013. Imran Khan said that actually it was '70 punctures' and not just 35.

2013 polls conducted 'fairly and in accordance with law', The News, July 23<sup>17</sup>

A three-judge inquiry commission investigating alleged rigging in the 2013 general election has stated in its final report that the polls were "organized and conducted fairly and in accordance with the law". Noting lapses by the Election Commission of Pakistan, the three-judge commission states in the report that "it cannot be said...that the elections were not a true and fair reflection of the mandate given by the electorate".

Altaf for JC to expose elements behind PTI sit-in, The News, July 23<sup>18</sup>

MQM Chief Altaf Hussain has called for formation of a judicial commission comprising Supreme Court judges to expose the elements that allegedly facilitated and financed the Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf sit-in last year. He said workers of the PTI should quit the party after proposed commission laid bare the facts. The MQM chief said the commission should probe as to who was backing Imran Khan to wrap up democracy in Pakistan through sit-in. On July 24, speaking at a press conference in Karachi, MQM leader Dr Khalid Maqbool Siddiqui said<sup>19</sup> "Imran Khan and his party should be asked from where they got billions of rupees which they spent to organise the sit-in," adding: "The government should also investigate the statement of Defence Minister Khawaja Asif in which he alleged that [the then] ISI chief was behind the PTI's sit-in.....Time has come for political parties and all democratic institutions to be united and hold all those accountable who want to derail democracy."

politics of allegations. Reacting over the Judicial Commissions report into poll rigging, the Maulana said those who levelled allegations have been exposed.

Imran Khan accepts JC report, will react later, The News, July 23<sup>21</sup>

PTI chairman Imran Khan has said he accepts the Judicial Commission report into allegations of election rigging but he would be able to comment on July 24 after reading the finding of the panel. Speaking to media Khan said “I would now see the report as it has been issued on the internet,” said Khan, adding that Mian Nawaz Sharif was “a lucky man to have read the commission report”.

Commission report, Editorial, Daily Times, July 24<sup>22</sup>

.....After the findings of the Commission, the PTI chairman should stand by his commitment made in the MoU signed between the negotiating panels of the PTI and PML-N. It was written in the terms of reference of the inquiry commission that all parties would accept the decision of the commission. There should not be any adventurism now. [...] The PTI chief needs to tender an apology to the nation for causing a huge dent to the economy or at least admit his fault for launching a protest movement that was based on rumours and 'political statements'.

A frivolous case, Cyril Almeida, The Dawn, July 26<sup>23</sup>

.....Basically, the commission found that the PTI had spun administrative anomalies into a vast conspiracy — but, at the most cursory of probing, the conspiracy collapsed into very ordinary explanations of a quintessentially Pakistani administrative cock-up..... There's little that can be kept secret at the constituency level. The commission didn't — couldn't — say it, but the PTI case was frivolous. It was, though, a frivolity based on Imran Khan's deadly serious quest to knock out the government and become prime minister. But we knew that already. Onwards, to the next PTI gimmick.

CM Punjab congratulates nation on JC report, The News, July 23<sup>24</sup>

On July 23, Chief Minister Punjab Shahbaz Sharif congratulated everyone on the judicial commission report but said “The damage caused to the nation and economy is still being felt because of the sit-ins which were held because of allegations of rigging during the elections.”

PPP, JUI-F and ANP ask PTI chief to apologise, Daily Times, July 24<sup>25</sup>

Sindh Information Minister Nisar Khuhro asked PTI Chairman Imran Khan to apologise to the nation. He said that Kaptaan had wasted precious time of the nation during his 126-day sit-in in Islamabad last year. Khuhro added that the Chinese president's visit to Pakistan was also postponed due to the protest. Awami National Party (ANP) leader Haji Adeel demanded an apology from the PTI chief on behalf of the people who suffered due to the 126-day-long sit-in. Sacked PTI leader Javed Hashmi said he was expecting same decision from the judicial commission. [...]He added that Imran Khan wanted to destroy the entire system on the directives of "someone". Hashmi also said some people had stepped aside after using Khan. [...]Chief of his own faction of the Jamiat Ulema-e-Islam, Fazlur Rehman, said that after the submission of the judicial commission's report those levelling charges against the federation stand exposed. He also demanded that Imran Khan apologise to the nation.

JC verdict is against ECP: Imran Khan, Dawn, July 25.<sup>26</sup>

PTI chairman Imran Khan said on July 25, that it is not him but Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif who should apologise over the JC report, as all political parties are in agreement that there was rigging during the 2013 general elections.... Imran lashed out at the Election Commission of Pakistan (ECP), saying "ECP had no idea of how the elections were being conducted." He quoted the judicial commission report which said "ECP had no coordination with provincial election commissions." Imran appreciated the performance of the judicial commission and said there was no conspiracy and the military's leadership was not involved. He lauded the chief justice saying "The chief justice brilliantly conducted this probe. He was alert, listening to every word, remembering every detail. But we had higher hopes.....We accepted the results for bringing transparency and for the sake of democracy's future." He also said "Initially I wanted them to open only four constituencies as a sample case to probe alleged rigging, but it took them a year to do so," said the PTI chief....Why did it take them two years and four months to get a judicial commission report?" Responding to a question, Imran said "PML-N forced us to initiate street protests. We accept the JC's decision but we will be the most formidable opposition for them in the assembly," he said.

<sup>27</sup> <http://www.thenews.com.pk/article-192364-PTI-not-abiding-to-its-agreement,-Dar-tells-NA>

Finance Minister Ishaq Dar presented the agreement between the federal government and the Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) regarding the Judicial Commission (JC) report in the National Assembly on July 27. Dar said that the PTI was not abiding to its agreement as according to the written contract, it is stated that if the elections are found to be transparent and fair, then the PTI will take back all its allegations of rigging. [...]The finance minister also added that the PTI had endorsed the agreement regarding the Inquiry Commission. PTI Leader Shah Mehmood Qureshi responded to Dar in the National Assembly today and said “Instead of being on the streets today, we are in the Assembly, so it’s a step forward which should be recognised.

Imran unfazed by party lawmakers’ unseating, The Express Tribune, July 31<sup>28</sup>
Unmoved by the looming threat of seeing his party ousted from the National Assembly, Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) chief Imran Khan has said the PTI will contest the elections again and win its way back into the legislative house if its lawmakers are unseated. Speaking in Lahore on July 30 after holding meetings with his party’s district organisers, Imran said the PTI did not need anyone’s support to stay in parliament as it had won the seats after taking part in the elections. “If the resignations are accepted, the party will contest elections and return to parliament,” he said.

MQM & ALTAF HUSSAIN

MQM be labelled terrorist outfit: Bugti, Daily Times, July 1<sup>29</sup>
Balochistan Home Minister Mir Sarfaraz Bugti on June 30 demanded that the MQM be labelled as a terrorist organisation and banned forthwith over its alleged involvement in anti-state activities. [...]The minister also said “India’s RAW is behind terrorist activities in Balochistan and Karachi,”

Rangers have made Sindh an occupied province: Altaf, The Dawn, July 4<sup>30</sup>
Criticising the ongoing targeted operation in Karachi, MQM chief Altaf Hussain on July 4 alleged that the Rangers had turned Sindh into what he called an “occupied province”, a press release on the party’s website said. “Sindh is burning and MQM workers are being treated like prisoners of war,” said the MQM chief, adding that that Sindh Chief Minister Syed Qaim Ali Shah’s attitude in this regard had been irresponsible. He further lamented that PPP Co-Chairman Asif Zardari’s dealings with the MQM had taken a disappointing turn.

Imran need not woory: MQM Rabitta Committee, Daily Times, July 5<sup>31</sup>

[...]“Whether to take a legal action against BBC or not is MQM’s problem, therefore, Imran Khan need not worry too much about this matter,” the MQM’s Rabitta Committee said in reaction to Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) Chairman Imran Khan’s statement on July 5. The Committee said the entire nation is aware of ‘which source Imran Khan is getting finances from to run his political campaign’. The MQM body said Imran Khan’s life from the playground to politics is a sum of leveling allegations against others. It said Imran Khan only remembers Karachi on the occasions of collecting funds and elections.

FIRs registered against Altaf Hussain, The Express Tribune, July 13<sup>32</sup>

Interior Minister Chaudhry Nisar Ali Khan on July 13 said that foul language used against security forces by MQM chief Altaf Hussain will not be tolerated, adding that it may be taken up with British authorities, Express News reported. On July 12, the MQM chief had cast doubts on the efficacy of the Rangers operation in Karachi likening the conduct of the paramilitary force with how the Indian army treats people in the disputed Kashmir territory. [...]Nisar said that speeches of MQM chief are touching the borders of extreme provocation, alleging that Altaf spoke the ‘language of Pakistan’s enemies.’

Resolutions against Altaf, Imran in Sindh Assembly, The News, July 15<sup>33</sup>

The MQM and PTI submitted resolutions against each other’s party leaders in the Sindh Assembly on July 15. The PTI submitted a resolution against MQM Chief Altaf Hussain’s statement. PTI leader Arif Alvi said the British government was hiding the money laundering issues, adding that he would be going to the British High Commission on July 15 to discuss this issue.

Altaf: Govt implicating MQM leaders in false cases, The News, July 16<sup>34</sup>

MQM chief Altaf Hussain has accused the government of implicating his party’s leaders in fake cases as number of FIRs against him surpasses 100 early on July 16. The FIRs are lodged across the country against the MQM chief for delivering ‘hate speech’ and ‘inciting violence’. In a statement issued from London, he said that MQM leaders and elected representatives have Upping the ante of their political attacks, PTI late on July 15, dealt another blow to MQM chief Altaf Hussain through an open letter written to British High Commissioner Philip Barton, urging London to take action against Hussain's derogatory remarks against Pakistan's armed forces.

MQM presents memo against Imran in UK, The News, July 15<sup>36</sup>

The MQM on July 15 presented a memorandum against Imran Khan in the UK High Commission, in a tit-for-tat move shortly after PTI submitted the memorandum against its chief Altaf Hussain over alleged hate speech. Speaking to media, MQM leader Farooq Sattar said Imran Khan, who was not appearing before a court despite being summoned abroad, couldn't level allegations against MQM.

MQM responds to PTI, files FIR against Imran, The Nation, July 15<sup>37</sup>

The MQM in the early hours of July 15 submitted an application to lodge a case against PTI Chairman Imran Khan for allegedly using offensive language against Army generals. The decision came soon after an application was filed at Darakhshan Police Station here by PTI leaders Ali Zaidi and Faisal Vawda against MQM chief Altaf Hussain.

Jamaat-i-Islami (JI) leader Liaquat Baloch has said MQM chief Altaf Hussain hatches conspiracies against the solidarity of the country while sitting in London. He said the PPP and the MQM had created crisis in national politics. ....Mr Baloch accused Asif Ali Zardari and the Sindh government of giving a free hand to the terrorists of MQM in Karachi to kill innocent people. ....Mr Baloch said the only solution to the problems of people and ills affecting the country lay in imposition of Islamic laws.

The National Assembly's standing committee on parliamentary affairs recommended on July 24 that local government elections in Punjab and Sindh planned for Sept 20 be put off in view of floods in the two provinces. The committee, headed by Mian Abdul Rahman, had previously recommended holding of polls in a phased manner to avoid recurrence of the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa-like mismanagement.

Big blow to PPP as Okara fort falls to PTI, The Nation, July 2<sup>40</sup>

In a major setback for PPP, two of its stalwarts from central Punjab joined PTI on July 1, following a meeting with chairman Imran Khan. Former state minister for information and incumbent PPP information secretary Syed Samsam Ali Shah Bokhari and former provincial minister of labour and manpower and PPP Punjab Labour Wing president Ashraf Sohna announced their joining in a ceremony at Khan's Bani Gala residence. Dozens of former PPP workers and office bearers from Okara district...also formally joined PTI at the ceremony.

He said that conspiracies are being hatched to implement a 'minus-Altaf' formula. He swore that the MQM has no links with RAW. Rather he declared the Indian spy agency an enemy of Pakistan as well as the enemy of the MQM. He said that his party workers were ready to fight alongside the army in case of conflict with India. The MQM chief has a right to defend himself, but the warning he has delivered during his speech is not appropriate. The statement was tantamount to incitement to violence when the state is already grappling with the problem of terrorism. Being the chief of a mainstream political party, Altaf Hussain should think twice before uttering such inflammatory words.

The PML-N could be collapsing from the inside and be wreaking havoc on the outside, yet, it remains on top. In contrast the PPP has lost the plot, and the game, and somehow even made the mistake of being seen as unpatriotic. This is a new era in the politics of Pakistan, where the 'A' team is team-status quo, friends with the military and infallible in the face of election rigging and disruptive protest politics. And who knew the PTI would become an 'A' team, the only team that is able to give the PML-N a good kick in the shins. ....The PML-N has left Zardari in the lurch. Zardari was mistaken when he supported the PML-N during the dharna days, a chip that he has been unable to cash. The number of those with a blind faith in our current democracy project is dwindling.....Naturally, with Zardari and Altaf Hussain as the poster-boys of democracy these days, they have a tough job. Their sermons on civilian supremacy have stopped making sense for another reason. While they'd like to paint General Raheel as a villain for encroaching upon civilian turf, the public is hailing him as a hero for doing exactly that.....These problems won't go away even if a better crop of leaders is brought forth through fair and free elections. Something more radical is needed to make the system responsive to public needs and representative of their aspirations. We need to restructure our federation and scrap the parliamentary system with a view to separate the executive from the legislature.

[...]So it was this Tuesday (June 30) that before Prime Minister Sharif travelled down to Karachi, he met Gen Sharif and discussed issues of great import. .... Given institutional histories, Prime Minister Sharif can hardly be faulted for wanting to be seen to be close to and working with his generals, while Gen Sharif would equally like to send a message to his rank and file and officer corps that he is lobbying for the military's institutional concerns at the highest levels. ....When the Karachi operation was launched in September 2013, there appeared to be significant civilian ownership and some clear political leadership.... Today, examining the all-too-familiar picture of Gen Raheel seated on the left and the prime minister on the right during one of the army chief's frequent visits to the prime minister's office, is there any sense other than the military leadership is the one with the initiatives and the ideas and the civilian government simply acquiesces or indicates to what extent it can go along with the military leadership's initiatives and ideas?

Chief Minister Sindh, Qaim Ali Shah.....has come out challenging raids conducted by the National Accountability Bureau (NAB) and the Federal Investigation Authority (FIA) in Sindh, saying that he considers it an invasion. He claims that Sindh already has departments investigating the crimes that the NAB and FIA are looking into, and that without his permission, these raids by the centre “interfere with provincial autonomy”. [...]A man of his experience should also know that while convention dictates that the Chief Minister be informed before the centre carries out investigations in the province, but it is merely a formality; not a procedural necessity on which the investigation depends, and certainly not an issue to decry on national television as Qaim Ali Shah has so dramatically done.

Editor’s note: The Dawn Editorial “Sindh CM’s accusations” also analyses the same issue in a different way. It argues that, despite federal government’s clarification, “there is something Sindh-specific about FIA and NAB’s recent crusades” and “Sindh appears to be the inordinate focus of interest by federal investigators in recent months.” It also underlines that “while the federal government has ...tried to suggest that ..the Sindh crackdown [is] entirely coordinated and led by the PML-N, there are clear and worrying signs that much of what is happening is occurring at the behest of the security establishment behind the scenes....A Sindh government that is at odds with not just the federal government but the military is a dangerous development in an ostensibly democratic framework.” <sup>62</sup>

Report on corruption, Editorial, The Dawn, July 9<sup>64</sup>

The report submitted by the National Accountability Bureau to the Supreme Court listing the details of 150 cases being pursued by NAB inspires little confidence. For one, the list appears to be a casual exercise, giving only a broad outline of the cases with names and the “gist of allegation”, with amounts arbitrarily put down. Many of the cases are over a decade old, yet are listed as “inquiry under progress”. The history of pursuing corruption cases in Pakistan is a chequered one mainly because of the repeated compromises struck between parties on account of political interference, the selective nature of the allegations, and political motivations behind many of the charges. It is worth noting the absence of names from the armed forces on the list. Why is it that three generals named in the Asghar Khan case, against whom the Supreme Court ordered legal proceedings, have still not been prosecuted?

Rangers’ stay in Karachi extended, Editorial, The Dawn, July 10<sup>65</sup>

The renewal of the Sindh Rangers’ mandate to stay in Karachi has rarely made the news. That wasn’t surprising, considering that the paramilitary force — whose mandate can be extended for a maximum of four months — has been deployed in Karachi since 1989, in some capacity or the other, to assist the city police in maintaining law and order. But what was routine once is no longer so, since the Rangers — who were given special powers of policing and arrest in late 2013 — have turned their guns, so to speak, on individuals in the provincial government for their purported misdeeds. ...There is good reason why the Sindh government’s tribulations are being met by the public with either indifference or outright support for the Rangers’ actions. It is thus that the politicians compromise themselves, and undermine democracy in the process.

Editor’s note: An editorial in Daily Times, “Ranger’s Stay” argues that the extension was granted after Zardari made a call to the Sindh Chief Minister. The editorial also underlines that both MQM and PPP are upset with the Ranger’s operations.<sup>66</sup>

There is a broad-based consensus in favour of a democratic and representative political order. However, the debatable question is whether ....we need to focus on the substance and quality of democracy .....which means two things: 1) constitutionalism, the rule of law and civil and political rights; 2) delivery of basic services to common people..... Democracy in Pakistan falters on both counts....Military activism from the sidelines is better than direct military rule. It creates a mixed or hybrid civil-military system where the governments are elected, while the military assumes an active role in security and administrative affairs from the sidelines. However, such a civil-military relationship is not stable because its boundaries change depending on the issue at hand and the relevant political context. If and when the military decides to go after hardline militant groups in Punjab or adopts both direct and indirect measures to control corruption, relations between the military and the PML-N government may get strained. Such a situation will require patience and prudence from both the civilian leadership and the military top brass to maintain equilibrium in civil-military relations, which is a prerequisite for maintaining stability and a semblance of democracy in Pakistan.

Not by force alone, I. A. Rehman, The Dawn, July 16<sup>68</sup>

The ongoing debate on the Rangers' mandate in Karachi and its time frame is apparently missing the central issue, namely, a mega metropolitan city's need for a democratic, efficient and corruption-free civic administration. [...]The main issue in Karachi is its need for a political understanding between the provincial government and the city's representatives on the one hand and among the latter's various ethnic groups on the other. [...]It is to be regretted that the respite offered by the grant of special powers to the Rangers has not been used to meet Karachi's two foremost needs — de-weaponisation of society and creation of an urban police that relies more on intellect and technology than brute force. ....There is no reason to believe that the military leaders are not aware of the risks in accepting calls to clean the civilian stables. They should be candid enough to tell the civil arm of the state to learn to carry its cross.

FOREIGN POLICY

AFGHAN TALKS

Afghan govt holds direct talks with Taliban, The Nation, July 8<sup>70</sup>

Members of Afghan government team on July 7, launched the long-awaited dialogue process with Taliban representatives in Islamabad in their first official face-to-face discussions. Confirming the development while speaking in Oslo, Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif called holding of the talks "a major breakthrough....I hope there will be a positive outcome which will certainly be very helpful for peace and stability in Afghanistan....There may be certain spoilers, but we should make sure that nobody tries to derail this process as it is not only the obligation of Afghanistan, Pakistan and other parties, but also the obligation of international community." In Islamabad, the Foreign Office said "As part of the commitment to facilitate an Afghan-led and Afghan-owned peace and reconciliation process, Pakistan is hosting a meeting between representatives of the Afghan government and Tehreek-e-Taliban Afghanistan (TTA). Further details will be shared later. The representatives of USA and China are attending as observers." ...Well-informed sources...said that Afghanistan's Deputy Foreign Minister Hikmat Khalil Karzai and Haji Din Muhammad, member, High Peace Council (HPC) and former Jihadi commander, flew to Islamabad two days back at the overt invitation of Pakistan. [...]The sources said Taliban side was represented by Maulvi Jalil and Qari Din Muhammad. A source privy to the development said the two sides drove to Murree, a hill resort, after Iftar amid tight security. However, another source said the delegation returned to Islamabad after a key member of Afghan Taliban based in Quetta made it to the federal capital for meeting the guests sent by the Afghan unity government. The sources said talks between the Afghan government's delegation and Taliban will continue until a tangible breakthrough is made. [...]According to sources, the development in Islamabad is continuation of peace talks with Taliban held in May in Urumqi city of China (which was denied by Afghan Taliban). The Afghan delegation in China was led by Mohammad Masoom Stanikzai who until last week was one of the key members of High Peace Council, the country's peace-negotiating body.

Pakistan's foreign policy wizard Sartaj Aziz said on July 13, that 'key leaders of the Afghan Taliban' had attended last week's rare face-to-face meeting with Afghan government officials in Murree with the approval of their Central Leadership Council. Afghan Deputy Foreign Minister Khalil Hekmat Karzai, who had led the high-level delegation from Kabul in the talks with the Taliban on July 7, had earlier confirmed this. "The people we met in Pakistan were representing Akhtar Mansoor (Taliban's acting chief) and their Central Shura (council)," Karzai had told the media in Kabul upon his return from Murree. .... "Yes, there will be some people who could try to sabotage the peace process," Aziz said. He was satisfied with the outcome of the Murree meeting. "It was very productive. It was the first time Afghan government officials and the Taliban sat across the table. The talks were open. It is a good beginning and we will see how it proceeds," he added. "I'm satisfied with the process. I call it a breakthrough."

Towards Afghan reconciliation, Editorial, The Dawn, July 9<sup>72</sup>

It was the sign that perhaps all those on the side of peaceful conflict-resolution were looking for: the Pakistani state getting directly involved in bringing together representatives of the Afghan government and the Afghan Taliban to effectively discuss the possibility of a peace and reconciliation process. That the US and China also had observers present at the Murree meeting suggests that it was a concerted, international effort — exactly what Afghanistan needs. To be sure, a peace process needs to be Afghan-owned — without the government and the Taliban leadership fully on board, there is no possibility of stability in Afghanistan — and final terms will have to be negotiated directly between the state and the insurgents. But regional and international support for a peace process is also key.....Yet, welcome as it is to see the Pakistani state play a frontline role in a possible peace process, there is still a long, long way to go and much can go wrong. ....Much as the world may want a peaceful settlement in Afghanistan, does the Taliban's leadership share that vision? And even if it does, can the leadership convince the rank and file to lay down their arms, especially when the new generation has known nothing but war? There are, as ever, many unanswered questions in Afghanistan.

Haqqanis in separate, direct talks.....The real enemy of peace talks lies in the divisions within Taliban ranks.....According to media reports, many field commanders have already threatened that they would either set up another group or join IS if the Taliban's political wing does not stop negotiations with Kabul. A few days before the recent Murree talks, the Hizb-i-Islami Afghanistan's head Gulbuddin Hekmatyar announced his support for IS. It appears as if he did not get a desired position in the Taliban-led negotiation team. At the same time, it also indicates that IS is emerging as an alternative and spoiling force in Afghanistan. [...]Contrary to the Quetta Shura, the Haqqanis are still a unified group. They are considered Afghanistan's most potent insurgent movement.....Prospects of direct engagement by the Haqqanis in the peace process are bright. Though they have declared in the past they will back the Mullah Omer-led peace process, they have not ruled out the possibility of direct talks with the Afghan government.....Pakistan has perhaps more leverage over the Haqqanis and can facilitate a direct channel for their talks with the Afghan government....If a ceasefire is brokered with the Haqqanis, it will bring down the level of violence in more than 50pc of Afghanistan.

After Murree, Moeed Yusuf, The Dawn, July 21<sup>74</sup>

Afghan President Ashraf Ghani's efforts to woo the Taliban to the negotiating table have received a fresh lease of life — courtesy Pakistan. Prior to the much-publicised Murree meeting .....Ghani was growing increasingly frustrated and demanding harsher measures to squeeze the Taliban leadership, but to no avail. This was puzzling, especially since the Pakistani security establishment seems to have got their diagnosis about Ghani and the current situation in Afghanistan dead right. One finds clear recognition within the establishment that Ghani is the best available partner for Pakistan; that he will not be able to sustain his Pakistan policy at home if talks with the Taliban don't move ahead; that a failure of Afghanistan's incumbent national unity government would potentially mean expanded civil war in the country, and this would inevitably cause spillover, including creating greater space for the Tehreek-i-Tali-ban Pakistan to operate out of Afghanistan. The Murree talks have solved the mystery of Pakistan's role to a large extent. It is clear that more was happening than we knew.....In as much as the Murree meeting has been declared a formal beginning of the reconciliation process between Kabul and the Taliban and that Mullah Omar has blessed it publicly, this is a significant breakthrough. And yet, we may be ignoring the real elephant in the room: the relationship between the Taliban leadership backing talks and those fighting on the ground.

Mullah Omar dies, Editorial, The Dawn, July 31<sup>75</sup>

In death, Mullah Omar has proved to be as controversial as he was in life. After overnight speculation on when, where and how the Taliban supreme commander had died, the Afghan Taliban appear to at least have put to rest speculation that one of the world's most famous recluses may be still be alive.....Why did the Afghan Taliban try and hide Omar's death and only confirm it once the Afghan government had leaked the news to the media? Only two weeks ago, the Afghan Taliban had claimed Mullah Omar had issued his standard pre-Eid missive. Were they lying then? Or have they been dissembling for years now? More importantly, from a dialogue perspective, has a group within the Afghan Taliban been lying about the internal cohesion of the Taliban and trying to use Mullah Omar's name to win a settlement with the Afghan Taliban that it cannot guarantee?.....Whoever takes over the Afghan Taliban now will have that much of a harder time trying to win over the faction committed to defeating the Afghan state militarily. The role of the outside powers too hardly seems benign in the present scenario. ....Either the outside powers are utterly clueless or recklessly naïve to have believed news of Mullah Omar's death could remain hidden.

End of Khyber-II, Editorial, The Dawn, July 4<sup>107</sup>

On the first anniversary of the ongoing Operation Zarb-i-Azb on June 15, the military wrapped up Operation Khyber-II in the Tirah region. [...]The principal threat in the Tirah region came from the TTP; the Mangal Bagh-led Lashkar-i-Islam; a breakaway TTP faction, the Jamaatul Ahrar; and sundry foreign militants. [...] It should be noted that Operation Khyber-II has not resulted in actual physical control by the military of all three passes from Tirah into Afghanistan — though the unreclaimed valleys of one of the three passes can, according to the military, be controlled by aerial firepower because the military now occupies the peaks over them. This means two things. One, Operation Khyber-II may require another phase for the total recapture of Tirah. Two, the military may apparently be forced into the continued use of air strikes in the Rajgal and Kachkol valleys to prevent the movement of militants until winter. [...]From this point onwards, the post-operation challenge is a familiar one: the military can hold and secure terrain, but it will only ever return to some semblance of long-term normality if the civil administration is allowed to function — and if the civilians show some ownership of the project.

Reclaiming FATA, Sikander Ahmed Shah, The Dawn, July 5<sup>108</sup>

....The conclusion of the operation [Khyber] should witness the replacement of the bulk of military units with law-enforcement bodies in the region. At the same time, however, it is important to deliberate upon and plan for the various challenges that the state will face in maintaining peace and security in the region.....Effective peace-building also requires the removal of draconian and over-inclusive legal provisions currently operative in Fata. Many laws go against fundamental rights. ....The autonomous status accorded to Fata by the British Raj and inherited by Pakistan, and the executive control exercised over the region through the Frontier Crimes Regulation, still in place, were attempts to further colonial imperatives in pre-Partition times by depriving Fata inhabitants of a universally recognised legal system.

Integrating FATA, Editorial, The Dawn, July 9<sup>109</sup>

...We have seen several task forces and commissions established in the past to suggest reforms in Fata.....Some recommendations are common to all these endeavours: these include extending judicial and parliamentary domains to Fata by amending Article 247 of the Constitution and reforming the draconian Frontier Crimes Regulation. However, implementation still seems a far cry. Two reasons appear at the core of non-implementation of these suggested reforms. The first and foremost is the state's unwillingness to see Fata through a development-centred paradigm rather than a security-centred one. ....The second reason is resistance by a minuscule class of vested interests that has perks and privileges in the present dispensation. ...However, the prerequisite for all this is that the state's strategic orientation towards Fata undergoes a shift towards development and integrative orientation.

The decade-old insurgency in Balochistan is no longer the monolith that it had so far appeared to be. [...] For several years, the unity between the various militant groups has been a distinguishing feature of the Baloch insurgency; areas of their operations even overlapped in many places without reports of friction. That seems to have effectively come to an end with the death of veteran Baloch nationalist Khair Bux Marri in June last year when a rift between his sons Mehran and Hyrbyair — who heads the BLA from self-exile in London — led to the creation of the UBA with other groups also aligning themselves with one side or the other. Such a rupture was perhaps inevitable at some point: prolonged militant movements become susceptible to internal crises stemming from differences over ideology and/or finances, which can then lead to disagreements about operational strategies. Where the security forces are concerned, the fracturing of the insurgency offers a tactical advantage for them to comprehensively crush the movement. [...]

Recent events indicate there is, at last, perhaps some realisation that a new approach is needed. There was the announcement of an amnesty for Baloch militants turning their backs on violence, and an initiative to hold talks with the Khan of Kalat in London is in the works as a means of reaching out to hardliner separatist leaders. However, unless the state discards its old proxies and prejudices, and takes the long view that actually addresses legitimate Baloch grievances, the province will remain a powder keg.

Malik Ishaq, chief of banned sectarian outfit Lashkar-i-Jhangvi, his two sons Usman and Haq Nawaz, and 11 others were killed in an alleged exchange of fire with police personnel late on July 28 night. At least six policemen were injured in the alleged encounter. Ishaq and his sons were arrested by the CTD a week ago. Following their latest arrest, the police had interrogated them and had subsequently taken them to Shahwala in Punjab's Muzaffargarh district to aid the police in recovering weapons and explosives, sources in the CTD said. The encounter appears to have taken place as militants attacked security forces and tried to free Ishaq who was killed in the ensuing exchange of fire, security sources say.

Guns in the night, Editorial, The Express Tribune, July 31<sup>136</sup>

As the only account of the incident of how Malik Ishaq was killed comes from the police, it is difficult to avoid speculating that there were elements of 'set-up' about it, that the encounter may have been staged with the deliberate purpose of permanently removing a man whose toxic message and lethal activities continued unabated, despite being behind bars. Also dead was the deputy leader of the LeJ, Ghulam Rasool, and there will now be a battle for succession within the LeJ that is unlikely to be bloodless. [...] Whilst we must welcome the successes of the law-enforcement agencies, we also have a growing concern that our justice system seems to be failing in its job of bringing people like Malik Ishaq to justice. Extra-judicial 'justice' can never be a long-term solution for the problem of sectarian violence that the country has faced for long. The rule of law is for everybody to abide by, including the police, and it is flouted at our peril.

Lack of evidence?, Editorial, The Dawn, July 10<sup>137</sup>

Perhaps one of the main reasons why militancy continues to thrive in Pakistan is that the government refuses to emerge from its state of denial where certain extremist outfits are concerned. The remarks made by Minister for States and Frontier Regions Abdul Qadir Baloch in the Senate on July 7 are a reflection of this. Mr Baloch said that as there was no evidence to link Jamaatud Dawa with Lashkar-e-Taiba, it would not be possible to proscribe the former, which he termed a 'charity' outfit. The statement seems to echo the 'good militant, bad militant' line apparently pursued by Pakistan's security establishment. While the minister is yet to discover any solid evidence, and while JuD chief Hafiz Saeed may deny all links, the fact is that

The terror of fighting terror, Rafia Zakaria, The Dawn, July 29<sup>138</sup>

On July 25, The New York Times published a report on the conditions in Pakistan's covert internment centres where those suspected of affiliation with the Pakistani Taliban are detained. Those incarcerated in these special prisons usually return dead or do not return at all....The report alleges there is little public outcry in Pakistan on this issue....The irony of The New York Times report was not the deficiencies of truth: extra-judicial killings, torture, unwarranted condemnations, lack of accountability and vengeful resurrection of executions are all crude and unjust realities of the Pakistani present. The odd twist in the report lay instead in the implication that the condition of having become terrible in the fight against terror was Pakistan's exclusive condition. In one illustrative instance, the report notes that the US State Department has continued to supply Pakistan with weapons and military aid despite being entirely aware of the country's poor human rights record. ....What is notable is the fact that a terror-fighting superpower (the US) and a terror-afflicted wannabe power (Pakistan) are both flouting the rule of law and the requirements of justice in their efforts to apprehend terrorists.

EDITORIALS AND OPINIONS

Trade and trust, Kamal Monoo, The Nation, July 8<sup>161</sup>

One of Nawaz administration's underrated virtues is its keenness to enhance Pakistan's trade. [...]Still, I don't know why this leadership has chosen to liberalise trade and economic linkages with India on such a priority basis and that too without doing proper homework on the subject; the last trip to Delhi earlier this year by the Commerce Minister to move post-haste with the NDMA (Non Discriminatory Market Access), later with the added acronym RB (on a Reciprocal Basis), was rather premature and quite ill timed, to say the least. [...]The reality is that not just in the context of Pakistan and India but even from a SAARC perspective, initiatives on further freeing up trade in South Asia or between specific SAARC countries to promote overall intra-regional trade - say between Pakistan and India or Bangladesh and Pakistan or India and Bangladesh, etc - without first entering into comprehensive agreements on regional (SAARC) trade as a whole, will just not help. ....whatever you may say about the benefits of free trade, most of those benefits have already been realised and further liberalisation in its current form can only help India and not Pakistan. And second, as I see it, the big problem here is one of trust. ....India, as we know has a history of either being clever with the 'finer print' or simply reneging on its promises made at the time of signing agreements; a recent report by CUTS International and India's behaviour in WTO Geneva meeting in 2014 bear testimony to this. So given this Indian past, you naturally want reassurance that the people negotiating the deal are, a) competent and b) listening to valid concerns of the real stakeholders. Regrettably, the present governmental team responsible for negotiating international trade deals falls short on both these counts.

A tale of two meetings, Cyril Almeida, The Dawn, July 12<sup>162</sup>

Afghan Taliban meet Afghan government. Everyone looks to Pakistan. Nawaz meets Modi. Everyone looks to Modi, and wonders what the boys here make of it. The good news is that we're in the news for the right reasons. Security via diplomacy and peace tables. The bad news is that the real action is elsewhere — and those elsewheres may be undermining the good news. .... Without the boys on board, it doesn't matter who's in Delhi. Pak-India can't be figured out or even worked on if civ-mil hasn't been figured out or even worked on. If we can figure that out sitting over here, you can imagine what a hawk sitting in Delhi would make of it. Talk to Nawaz when the boys won't listen? Uhuh. And that arrogance and complacency is what makes the hawk in Delhi the best friend of the boys here: the boys get status quo, but Delhi gets the blame. Security via diplomacy and peace tables is always good news. But when the real action may be elsewhere, brace yourself for bad news.

Back On Track?, Editorial, The Nation, July 15<sup>163</sup>

.....The reputation and efficacy of Track II diplomacy has been marred by regular interruptions due to terrorist attacks. Much depends whether the current uneasy peace between the countries can be maintained..... The elephant in the room, Kashmir, was not on the list. This was despite the fact that Aziz had said earlier on that Pakistan would not start a dialogue with India unless the Kashmir dispute was on the agenda. ...Our policy [on Kashmir] might be clear, but if we never get to bring it up at a discussion with Indian diplomats we cannot move towards a resolution. The Indian refusal to use the K-word seems to imply that they think that Kashmir is a part of India— end of discussion. Indian leaders have to realise that they are not a superpower yet, and not as intimidating as they think they are. A bigger economy, a bigger population, and a nuclear weapon, do not give them squatting rights over a disputed territory.

Editor's Note: The Dawn Editorial "Back-channel talks" welcomes the initiative taken by India and Pakistan to start back-channel talks. The omission of Kashmir from the joint statement is good in a way, editorial suggests, because of the adverse public opinion in both the countries. However, the editorial also suggests caution as India did not give any indication of establishing durable peace with Pakistan.

Conflict resolution, Editorial, The Dawn, July 22<sup>164</sup>

Until the political leadership of the two countries decide that peace is not just a priority but a necessity too, the most that will happen is the ad hoc management of tensions. In truth, however, the political leaderships need help from other constituencies — in particular, the respective security establishments of Pakistan and India. Here in Pakistan, while it is relatively clear that the military leadership is not spoiling for a fight with India, particularly as it struggles to contend with massive and sprawling domestic security concerns, there is a sense that it is unwilling to consider the full dividends of a comprehensive peace. Instead, the military's approach seems largely rooted in the past — a perhaps rightful insistence on the resolution of decades-old disputes with a wrongheaded resistance to proposing new ideas and avenues to achieve peace. Meanwhile, the Indian government and its security establishment appears to think that Pakistan can either be isolated or bullied into submission. Where is the vision in that? Pakistan and India deserve more than what their respective leaderships are providing at the moment.

Indo-Pak conundrum, Editorial, The Express Tribune, July 26<sup>165</sup>

....The only time India showed any interest in finding a mutually acceptable solution to the dispute was in 2001 at the Agra Summit. The setting for the Summit, too, was seemingly orchestrated by India with guns at the Line of Control (LoC) falling silent by mutual consent. But the attempt failed at the eleventh hour because of misreading of the situation by the hawks in Atal Behari Vajpayee's cabinet and the mistimed bluster of then Pakistan president Pervez Musharraf. [...]Except for the Agra Summit where it showed an inclination to discuss Kashmir threadbare, New Delhi has never shown, all through these nearly 67 years, a willingness even to consider Kashmir as a problem needing bilateral negotiations for its resolution. It has, however, on a number of occasions indicated that it would like to cement the LoC into a permanent border between the two countries. This is not acceptable to Pakistan. But perpetual confrontation with India also does not suit us. .....We could see the ebbing freedom struggle gaining new momentum, with the urgency in the struggle being provoked by the Indian prime minister's clandestine attempts to strip Kashmir off its special status.

EXCERPTS FROM URDU MEDIA & SELECT JIHADI LITERATURE

London Police's Stance on Tariq Mir— Result of pressure from Indian High Commission, Daily Ummat, July 1, 2015.<sup>166</sup>

The clarification coming from the spokesman of London Police on the Tariq Mir case was the result of direct pressure from Indian High Commissioner in London. Indian government had strong apprehensions that accepting Tariq Mir's original statement would give Pakistan a chance to expose India in the UN General Assembly(UNGA). .....Pakistan wanted to catch India red-handed with regard to illegal and un-called for interference in Pakistan's internal affairs. For this reason, Indian High Commission worked tirelessly to thwart Pakistan's attempts to destroy its image. The B.B.C. sources revealed that the leaked-out statement by Tariq Mir was genuine and part of legal documents available only with the London Police. It was very difficult to disown these documents and rescue Indian government. However, under pressure from the Indian HC, British legal experts were called in to prepare new statements at the end of the day. In the new statement only that part of Tariq Mir's statement was scrapped, which was not related to the murder case of Imran Farooq.

Indian intervention to be raised at all fora, Editorial, Daily Dunya, July 1, 2015.<sup>167</sup>

India's intervention in our internal matters will not be tolerated anymore and the decision to raise the issue at UNGA is welcome. India's funding to terrorists, separatists and anti-national elements operating inside Pakistan is not a new phenomenon. This has been going on for the past 10 years. Many anti-national elements and groups have been getting funds, arms and ammunition and training by India. Indian Consulates located in Afghanistan have been providing funds and facilities to the enemies of our country. Unfortunately, our agencies have been rather inefficient in tackling this problem. Come what may, we have to bring this issue before the UN. It is now our religious duty to present all these evidences before the world community. We should also call for a meeting of Foreign Ministers of O.I.C. and apprise them about illegal Indian interference in our domestic affairs. We should call for a meeting of Pakistani ambassadors and tell them to acquaint the leaders of their accredited countries about India's illegal activities inside Pakistan and ask them to condemn this issue with all vehemence.

Safoora Goth and Al Qaeda-RAW Collaboration, Malik Jehangir Iqbal, Hilal, Vol. 51, No. 12, p.19.

....When during Mumbai attacks some people besieged the whole city, the England cricket team cancelled their scheduled tour and left. After some days, they returned saying that "we stand by India in these tough times". What has India done— other than killing innocent Kashmiris and spreading terror in Pakistan— to deserve such show of solidarity while not a single word was uttered in defence of a frontline ally like Pakistan? The Indian defence minister has again said that they would support terrorism in our side of Kashmir. This is to obstruct the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor. Moreover, India is quite riled by the Pakistan Army chief's visit to Kabul and the growing cooperation between the two countries. The Agreement between intelligence agencies of the two countries has made India restless which shuts the doors for India to play its dirty tricks there...Authentic sources have now revealed that RAW was indeed involved in the Safoora Goth incident. Interestingly, all the four persons who were arrested over the incident belonged to Al-Qaeda. Enemy's enemy is a friend and here Al-Qaeda and RAW have now developed strong links with each other. Thanks to this coalition, RAW now makes use of suicide bombers and Al-Qaeda and has developed safe heavens in cities like Karachi. RAW is thus using many players throughout Pakistan. ....it works in the name of TTP in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, uses the label of BLA in Baluchistan, works under the banner of some NGO's in Punjab and in the name of some political parties in Sindh.

India's nefarious plans to sabotage Pakistan's economic projects, Editorial, Daily Dunya, July 10, 2015.<sup>168</sup>

It has become crystal clear that India could never become Pakistan's friend. It is beyond one's comprehension why some sections in Pakistan still nurture illusions of developing friendly relations with our neighbour. Needless to say, India has been engaged in carrying out incessant militant attacks inside Pakistan. India's involvement in terrorist activities has increased in recent years. You name any place – Baluchistan, FATA, Karachi or any city – everywhere one finds RAW's footprints. Now when Pakistan is set upon the road to economic progress, India's intelligence agency RAW has been found frantically engaged in destabilizing our country's economy. It seems a bitter pill to swallow for India. For last few years, there are strong apprehensions among various section of Pakistan civil society that India cannot tolerate Pakistan's economic development. This is evidently clear from the fact that India ensured that Kala Bagh dam would not be built by funding some groups in Pakistan who opposed such a venture.

India should learn a lesson after losing a drone, Editorial, Daily Ummat, July 17, 2015.<sup>169</sup>

Pakistan army brought down an Indian spy drone near Line of Control.... India should know that Pakistan also has drones that can carry missiles and capture photographs as well. If India didn't refrain from sending its drones to our region then we also have the capability to use our drones against India and target its cities... Those in Pakistan who want to have trade relations with India and have high hopes about such relationship must realize that India can never be our friend especially when it has a hardcore Hindu and extremely biased Narendra Modi as its prime minister. For most of the Indians, partition was a bad idea. For them, it was like cutting the holy cow (Gaw Maata) into two pieces and they will always try to have their akhand bharat. For this reason, they are against the freedom of Kashmir. India has besieged Kashmir with its seven lakh forces.

Nawaz Sharif should tell the Nation why he didn't raise Kashmir issue in Ufa, Editorial, Daily Nawa-i-Waqt, July 11, 2015.<sup>170</sup>

Although media has reported that both countries have accepted to resolve all outstanding issues, the absence of Kashmir in the final declaration signed by two leaders reduces it to just a photo session.... Pakistan should not expect anything positive from such meetings with India as behaviour of Indian leaders clearly demonstrates that they do not want better relations with Pakistan. Last year, India cancelled the foreign secretary level talks and before that Manmohan Singh also flared up tension on border instead of coming to Pakistan. The current Prime Minister has himself issued anti-Pakistan statements on several occasions and has openly advocated weakening of our country. How can one hope that he would come with a solution of Kashmir to Pakistan?

Kashmir and Kashmiris cannot be ignored, Editorial, Daily Jehan Pakistan, July 16, 2015.<sup>171</sup>

In any bilateral level talks between India and Pakistan, 'Kashmir' will always be the core issue. It is the reality which one could not ignore at any stage. Let both the countries make progress on several other issues and development projects. But the fact remains that until the problem of Kashmir is resolved according to hopes and aspirations of Kashmiris there will not be peace between India and Pakistan.

Afghan government had always held different views about Pakistani government and military establishment but this time talks were organized by the ISI and the foreign secretary was representing the Pakistani government. Afghan government cannot say anymore that the civilian government of Pakistan and the military leadership were on different pages and derailed the process.

Provincial status for Gilgit-Baltistan would be detrimental to Pakistan's interests, Editorial, Daily Muhasib, July 9, 2015.<sup>175</sup>

President of Jammu and Kashmir Sardar Yaqub has stated that any effort by Pakistan to accord provincial status to Gilgit-Baltistan could be detrimental and would have far-reaching negative consequences...After Eid festival, government of Azad Kashmir would convene a meeting of All Parties' Hurriyat Conference and would register its protest to the federal authorities in Islamabad in this regard....The political leadership in Pakistan, who do not have any knowledge of history and geography of Gilgit-Baltistan region, have ruined the spirit of freedom movement of Kashmir.

Pakistan-China-Russia Joint military Exercises, Editorial, Daily Nawa-i-Waqt, July 7, 2015.<sup>176</sup>

Pakistan, Russia and China have decided to have joint military exercises on the occasion of International Defense Games scheduled to be held in August this year. Venezuela, Egypt and Belarus will also participate in these exercises. Pakistan and Russia have only now come closer to each other and as a result they have resumed bilateral relations. This was very much required to maintain balance of military power in the region. Very recently, Pakistan Army Chief Gen. Raheel Sharif visited Russia. During his visit, he discussed issues like terrorism, spread of arms and exchanged views on political and military problems facing the region. Let us not forget that before this, Pakistan and Russia never had any economic or any other kind of bilateral agreement...Such close defence collaboration with Russia would contain the ever-expansionist policy of India.....This would obviously send the signal to Uncle Sam to abandon its policy of upgrading political and military status of India in the region. All big powers should join hands to foil all American plans to elevating India to a position of sardar in South Asia region.

Wafadar Kutta Aur us ka Gham, TTP's Umar Media, July 13, 2015.<sup>177</sup>

You might have seen in America that people love to have dogs. Dogs are the only best friends of Americans because they know how untrustworthy their fellow Americans can be. Interestingly, dogs are available in every size and colour and they are very loyal to their bosses who feed them. Whenever the boss is in danger, the dog takes all kinds of risks to get him out of that. Unfortunately same is the case with Pakistan army which always dances to the tunes of America. The Americans love dogs so much that they raise memorials in their honour when they die. John Kerry displayed a similar gesture when he laid wreaths at the graves of Pakistan army men during his last visit to Pakistan.
