A four-member team of India's National Investigation Agency (NIA) headed by Sharad Kumar went to Dhaka on November 17 to share information about militancy with Bangladesh and find out a mechanism to jointly fight against the menace. The NIA team handed over to intelligence agencies in Dhaka a list of 11 suspected Bangladeshi militants believed to be behind the October 2 Burdwan blast. Bangladesh also handed over to the NIA a list of 51 - 10 militants and 41 top criminals - who are believed to be hiding in India. Bangladesh and India have planned simultaneous raids along the border to nab the hiding members of the outlawed Jama'atul Mujahideen Bangladesh (JMB). The Home Ministry of Bangladesh Government formed a six-member committee to work on militancy and extend cooperation to the NIA in the investigation. Additional Home Secretary Kamal Uddin Ahmed heads the committee which will have representatives of intelligence agencies.<sup>1</sup>

for submission of evidence to the investigation, 30 October, that had been originally set by the OHCHR had been changed unofficially and re-set once again. As per the OHCHR's call for submissions on its website, the deadline, 30 October, was definite and mandatory. However, the Spokesperson of the OHCHR, in response to a question from the Colombo Gazette and The Sunday Leader had later stated that, although officially the deadline was 30 October and will not be extended, it is understood that some material may take time to arrive and that submissions arriving late, therefore, will not necessarily be refused. Expressing objection to OHCHR's conduct that is inconsistent with essential standards of objectivity and fair play, Professor Peiris questioned why such irregular behaviour has to be resorted to in carrying out this investigation which claims to be open, candid and fair.<sup>8</sup>

The European Union and Kiev have signed an agreement on November 17 in Brussels that calls for establishing an EU advisory mission in Ukraine that will carry out reforms of the country's security sector.<sup>38</sup>

Russia has said that several of its diplomats had been expelled from Poland on November 17 and that a number of Polish diplomats had left Russia after Moscow took "adequate" measures in return. Ties between Russia and European Union member states have been strained by the crisis in Ukraine. Poland, for decades under communist rule and dominated by Moscow, has been one of Moscow's most outspoken critics.<sup>39</sup>

Ukrainian President Petro Poroshenko has said that it is too early for Ukraine to join the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO). However, he did not rule out such a possibility in the future. Earlier, Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov had said that Ukraine's non-aligned status remains the core issue for Moscow in the ongoing standoff.<sup>40</sup>

Foreign Minister Pavlo Klimkin has said that Ukraine does not plan to resume military operations in the east but the country expects military and technical assistance from the European Union. He also stressed that Kiev "will continue energy supplies to the region in full."<sup>41</sup>

Russian Defence Minister Sergey Shoigu, who paid an official visit to Beijing during November 17-19, has stressed on the importance of a Russia-China military-technical cooperation in the evolving global security situation and the need to form a regional collective security system in the Asia-Pacific region. He also stated that the two partners should stand against 'colour revolutions' that both countries face. It was announced that they will hold joint naval drills in the Pacific and in the Mediterranean in 2015.<sup>42</sup>

Russia's United Engine-building Corporation (a part of Rostec) and China National Aero-Technology Import & Export Corporation (CATIC) have agreed, on November 18, to jointly modernize the RD-93 turbojet engine developed by Russia's St. Petersburg-based company Klimov. These will be used for the Chinese J-31 and JF-17 fighter jets.<sup>43</sup>

The United States proposed extending an interim agreement with Iran in a recognition that talks to settle deep differences over Tehran's nuclear programme were unlikely to succeed on deadline. President Obama said, the interim agreement had successfully rolled back Iran's nuclear capacity, but he expressed doubt about whether the "significant" gaps could be bridged to achieve a permanent accord. A delay carries political complications for Washington and Tehran. It could hamper the Obama administration's ability to get congressional approval for easing sanctions against Iran. It also could embolden Iranian hard-liners opposed to any agreement involving the United States.<sup>44</sup>

An Iranian-British woman jailed for trying to attend a men's volleyball game in Iran was released on bail. She was detained in June 2014 at a Tehran stadium after trying to attend a men's volleyball match between Iran and Italy.<sup>45</sup>

Commander of Khatam ol-Anbia Air Defence Base Esmayeeli said in a press conference on the occasion of the Air Defence Day in Iran that "Arash 2 radar system with the capability of discovering small flying objects which is based on the world's state-of-the-art technology is one of the latest achievements" of Iran's air defence.<sup>46</sup>

Iraq's central government and the autonomous region of Kurdistan reached an interim agreement over oil exports and budget payments. The conflict began when Iraq government claimed that Kurdistan is exporting oil directly to Turkey not through Iraq's oil Ministry. So the central government stopped sending to Kurdistan 17 percent of the national budget allotted to the regional government. Under the agreement, the central government will pay $500 million to the Kurdistan Regional Government, or K.R.G., from the national budget while the Kurds will let the Iraqi government sell 150,000 barrels per day of the oil exported by the Kurds.<sup>48</sup>

Iraqi security forces have re-entered the country's biggest oil refinery at Baiji, the recapture of which would be the Baghdad government's most important military success since ISIS seized most of northern and western Iraq during the summer. This important oil refinery produces 3,000,000 barrels oil per day<sup>49</sup>. This oil refinery was one of the significant sources of revenue for the terror group as they earned billions of dollars by oil smuggling.

The Syrian President al-Assad told a meeting of ruling Baath Party that "ISIS has not come out of thin air". President al-Assad considered that the international situation 'lacks vision in the current stage' in light of the atrocities of terrorist organizations, namely the Islamic state in Iraq and Syria, known as ISIS. "ISIS came to cap accumulating wrong-headed policies by parties involved in the war against Syria that have supported, armed and funded terrorist and militant organizations to undermine Syria," he added, referring to countries that have backed the Syrian armed rebel.<sup>50</sup>

- Deputy Secretary of Defence Robert Work Looks to Industry to Maintain Technology Edge; Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Dempsey Calls for defence budget increase, flexibility; undersecretary of defence for intelligence Chief Vickers describes national security challenges; Department of Defence releases revised FY 2015 MIP request; President Obama chose confrontation over conciliation to reshape the nation's immigration system; Obama Defends use of executive authority on immigration reform.

In remarks at the "Defence One Summit" in Washington on November 19, Deputy Secretary of Defence Robert O. Work stressed the importance of engaging industry, services and the Defence Business Board in maintaining the United States' technological edge in coming years. Work noted the challenge of balancing resources and requirements against the landscape of what he called an "especially chaotic" drawdown and a persistent continuing resolution over the past five years.<sup>57</sup>

The American military is being asked to do more in an increasingly volatile world and Congress needs to increase its budget and give the department spending flexibility, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Martin E. Dempsey said on November 19. "I have run out of adjectives to describe" what the budget uncertainty and lack of flexibility is doing to the United States military, Gen. Dempsey told journalist Kevin Baron at the "Defence One Summit" in Washington. The military needs more money because there are new requirements – reassurance to Europe, operations in Iraq and Syria as well as support for stopping Ebola in West Africa. Defence Secretary Chuck Hagel's nuclear posture review also has costs, Dempsey noted.<sup>58</sup>

Protecting military networks is among many national security challenges the nation faces, the undersecretary of defence for intelligence, Michael G. Vickers said in Washington on November 20. In remarks at the "Defence One Summit", Vickers said the challenges, both unconventional and novel are likely to be enduring and will require the attention of both the government and the private sector. Vickers emphasized the importance of cybersecurity to defend the nation's critical infrastructure and in supporting combatant commanders in the new warfare domain. And adversaries can use cyber to their advantage, he noted.<sup>59</sup>

President Obama chose confrontation over conciliation on November 20 as he asserted the powers of the Oval Office to reshape the nation's immigration system and all but dared members of next year's Republican-controlled Congress to reverse his actions on behalf of millions of immigrants. In an address from the East Room of the White House that sought to appeal to a nation's compassion, Mr. Obama told Americans that deporting millions is "not who we are" and cited Scripture, saying, "We shall not oppress a stranger for we know the heart of a stranger — we were strangers once, too." The prime time speech reflected Mr. Obama's years of frustration with congressional gridlock and his desire to frame the last years of his presidency with far-reaching executive actions. His directive will shield up to five million people from deportation and allow many to work legally, although it offers no path to citizenship.<sup>61</sup>

President Obama, in an interview broadcast on November 23, said he rejects Republican criticism that he has exceeded his authority in moving to spare millions of undocumented immigrants from deportation, adding that he has been "very restrained" in his use of executive authority. Earlier angry Republican lawmakers have accused Mr. Obama of unconstitutional, even imperial, overreach. They have pointed to past remarks in which he himself suggested that his powers to act were limited.<sup>62</sup>

Deputy Secretary of Defence Bob Work and Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Martin Dempsey met with Pakistan's Chief of Army Staff, Gen. Raheel Sharif on November 18 at the Pentagon. The leaders discussed regional security issues and their commitment to an enduring partnership. On November 18, US Defence Secretary Chuck Hagel called Russia's actions in Ukraine "dangerous and irresponsible" and said the tensions provoked by Moscow have probably done more to unify NATO than anything else in years. "It has brought the world together in a way where they are isolating themselves by their actions," Hagel said of Russia, as he took questions from Marines during a visit to North Carolina's Camp Lejeune.<sup>64</sup>

U.S. and partner-nation military forces continued to attack Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant terrorists in Syria and Iraq over the last three days, U.S. Central Command officials reported. The strikes were conducted as part of Inherent Resolve, the operation to eliminate the terrorist group ISIL and the threat they pose to Iraq, the region and the wider international community. The destruction of ISIL targets in Syria and Iraq further limits the terrorist group's ability to project power and conduct operations, officials said.<sup>65</sup>

The U.S.-led fight against the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant is showing good signs of progress, and the first of 1,500 additional U.S. troops that President Barack Obama ordered to Iraq should begin arriving there in the next few weeks, Defence Secretary Chuck Hagel said in a PBS interview broadcast on November 19. Since June 2014, ISIL has overrun cities and towns across a swath of territory spanning the Iraqi-Syrian border, and a coalition of nations is working to degrade, and ultimately destroy, the terrorist group.<sup>66</sup>

President Obama decided in recent weeks to authorize a more expansive mission for the military in Afghanistan in 2015 than originally planned, a move that ensures American troops will have a direct role in fighting in the war-ravaged country for at least another year. Mr. Obama's order allows American forces to carry out missions against the Taliban and other militant groups threatening American troops or the Afghan government, a broader mission than the president described to the public earlier in 2014, according to several administration, military and congressional officials with knowledge of the decision. The new authorization also allows American jets, bombers and drones to support Afghan troops on combat missions.<sup>67</sup>

On November 20, India and the US held the first meeting of a revived high technology working group to give a fillip to the government's 'Make in India' programme. The High Technology Cooperation Group (HTCG) has been revived to strengthen the bilateral strategic partnership and boost bilateral high technology trade following the US visit of Prime Minister Narendra Modi. Foreign Secretary Sujatha Singh, addressing the HTCG in New Delhi, said that "for the first time, in the true spirit of public-private partnership, the High Technology Cooperation Group will have a working group meeting on high-tech manufacturing which would see joint participation from both government and industry".<sup>72</sup>

Speaking at the ninth meeting of India-US High Technology Cooperation Group (HTCG) in New Delhi on November 20, Eric L Hirschhorn, Under Secretary for Bureau of Industry and Security, US Department of Commerce, said that "Increased defence trade and cooperation is vital part of advancing our partnership. India now conducts more military exercises with the US than any other country and defence trade has increased over the past decade. He added, "Expanding trade and cooperation provides a win-win for the US and Indian national security interests".<sup>73</sup>

President Barack Obama will visit India in January 2015 as the guest of honour for the country's symbolically important Republic Day celebrations—a sign of a significant warming of relations between the world's two largest democracies. Mr. Obama will be the first American president to attend India's Republic Day celebrations, which is usually marked by a major military parade. The planned visit is a symbol of improving U.S.-India ties after Mr. Modi travelled to the White House in September 2014. In a summit that officials said gave the two leaders an opportunity to establish a rapport, the two leaders agreed to strengthen security relations.<sup>74</sup> The White House in a press release stated that during the visit the "President will meet with the Prime Minister and Indian officials to strengthen and expand the U.S.-India strategic partnership."<sup>75</sup>
