Terrorism is morphing into different types of threats, including cyberattacks that can impact nations across the globe, the director of central intelligence said in New York last week. John Brennan told the Council on Foreign Relations that terror attacks in Europe, the Middle East, Africa and Central Asia show the terror threat is changing. The CIA working with foreign partners is key to defeating the terror threat, he added. The U.S. defence budget is strategy driven and the nation will be at greater risk if the budget is cut or if sequestration is triggered this year, the vice chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff said in Washington on March 17. Speaking at the McAleese/Credit Suisse Defence Programmes Conference held at the Newseum, Navy Adm. James A. Winnefeld Jr. said the president's fiscal year 2016 budget proposal allows the DoD to defend America's national interests. The budget request is $35 billion more than envisioned under sequestration, a law requiring major spending cuts that will take effect in October unless Congress changes it. Even at that number, the department will be at the edge of acceptable risk, the admiral said.<sup>69</sup>

This year, the Defence Department will move aggressively to reverse the trend of chronic underinvestment in weapons and capabilities, the deputy defence secretary Bob Work said in Washington on March 17. The bottom line, Work said in prepared remarks, is that "because of budget uncertainty and restrictions imposed by Congress, and because of our unrelenting focus on the readiness of forward deployed forces, we're chronically underinvesting in new weapons and capabilities." Work added, "That should give all of us pause because our technological dominance is no longer assured."<sup>70</sup>

The process of destroying the chemical stockpile at the U.S. Army Pueblo Chemical Depot is set to begin on March 17 on Colorado, defence officials said. Undersecretary of Defence for Acquisition, Technology and Logistics Frank Kendall granted final approval to begin destroying 2,611 tons of World War II-era mustard agent stored near Pueblo. "After months of preparation, testing and scrutiny by oversight and regulatory agencies, the Pueblo team is ready to play its part in meeting our nation's commitment to the 100 percent destruction of the U.S. chemical weapons stockpile," Conrad F. Whyne said. Whyne is programme executive officer for Assembled Chemical Weapons Alternatives, the responsible government agency.<sup>71</sup>

The proposed defence budget is in line with fiscal year 2015 projections, halting the decline in defence spending and making available the resources needed to execute the nation's defence strategy, Defence Secretary Ash Carter told a House panel in Washington on March 18. Carter and Army Gen. Martin E. Dempsey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, testified this morning before the House Armed Services Committee, whose members include 23 veterans. The president is requesting a defence budget for fiscal year 2016 that is $36 billion above the caps, or sequester levels, of the Budget Control Act, Carter said. "And as the chairman noted," he told the panel, "strategy comes first and that's the appropriate way to think about the budget. But -- and I want to be clear about this -- under sequestration, which is set to return in 197 days, our nation would be less secure."<sup>72</sup>

Meanwhile, Director of the Missile Defence Agency, Navy Vice Adm. James D. Syring told to the Congress on March 18 that the Agency's fiscal year 2016 budget request continues the development of defences for the nation, deployed forces and allies and international partners against increasingly capable ballistic missile threats. Syring told members of the Senate Appropriations Committee's defence subcommittee that the $8.127 billion request will also continue his agency's support of the needs of warfighters and combatant commanders. The agency's budget request maintains its commitment to operate and sustain national defences, he said, including the planned deployment of ground-based interceptors: 40 to Fort Greely, Alaska, and four to Vandenberg Air Force Base, California, for a total of 44 by the end of 2017.<sup>73</sup>

Space capability is critical to national security, and the Defence Department is working to make its launch programme more competitive and end its long-time use of a Russian rocket engine on the Atlas launch system, the assistant secretary of defence for acquisition said earlier in March 2015. Katrina G. McFarland testified before the House Armed Services Committee's strategic forces subcommittee March 17 on options for assuring domestic space access. "Our defence space capabilities are central to our national security," McFarland said in written testimony. According to law, she added, the Defence Department must sustain at least two launch vehicles that can deliver any national security payload into space, and it must maintain a robust space-launch infrastructure and industrial base.<sup>74</sup>

Since its inception in 1999, Centcom’s release said, Eagle Resolve has been a venue for the U.S. and Arabian Gulf countries to partner with militaries from North and South America, Europe and Asia – all regions are represented at this year’s exercise – and address their collective security concerns in a relatively low-risk environment. The current exercise began March 8 and concludes March 31.<sup>80</sup>

The potential deployment of a sophisticated U.S. air defence system in South Korea to counter the North’s missile threat is proving a headache for Seoul as it tries to walk a fine line between its closest security ally Washington and its biggest trade partner China. Since June, U.S. military officials have said the Terminal High Altitude Area Defence (THAAD) system was needed in South Korea given Pyongyang’s growing missile arsenal, although there has been no formal proposal from Washington. While China initially said little about such a deployment, it has begun to express opposition, prompting some lawmakers in Seoul to express concern over the possible fallout on ties. At the same time, other MPs have said basing THAAD batteries in South Korea would strengthen the country’s security alliance with Washington. The wrangle comes as Seoul also debates whether to join a Chinese-led development bank that the United States opposes.<sup>81</sup>

Meanwhile, Defence Secretary Ash Carter has approved a nine-month rotation of an Army multiple launch rocket system battalion to South Korea, according to a DoD news release issued on March 20. The first rotational battalion of approximately 400 soldiers belongs to the 2nd Battalion, 20th Field Artillery. Deploying from Fort Hood, Texas, the unit will join the 210th Field Artillery Brigade this June in Camp Casey, South Korea, the release said. This battalion will arrive fully manned, trained, equipped and at the highest level of readiness. The initial rotating unit will leave their equipment in place for future rotations. The addition of the MLRS battalion to the field artillery brigade is part of an Armywide reorganization that will raise the number of MLRS battalions from two to three in all field artillery brigades. The change will increase theatre readiness and manoeuvre capabilities, the release noted.<sup>82</sup>

U.S. lawmakers have sent a letter to U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry to push for reunions between Korean Americans and their family members in North Korea. The letter, signed by Representative Charles Rangel and Senator Mark Kirk, called on Kerry to prioritize the reunions of Korean Americans who were separated from their families during the Korean War. “We write to encourage you to prioritize the reunions of Korean Americans separated from their families in the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea (DPRK),” the letter said. Since 2000, North and South Korea have

On March 18, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff opened a photo exhibit at the Pentagon that puts America's relations with China in a new light. Army Gen. Martin E. Dempsey praised the exhibit - titled "National Memories" - which shows American and Chinese service members working together during World War II. The United States and China were allies during the war, and more than 250,000 Americans served in the China-Burma-India Theatre under Army Gen. Joseph Stilwell. Retired Army Col. John Easterbrook, the grandson of that theatre commander, spoke at the opening ceremony about the campaign. Actions in Europe and in the Pacific overshadowed the scope of the effort in the region, he said, and many present-day Americans are surprised to learn of the U.S. effort against Japan in China. In China, too, the American effort in the country was forgotten, but for other reasons. Following the war, a civil war broke out in China, and with the victory of Mao Zedong's Communist party all mention of cooperation with America was stricken from the record. "Many photos, letters, memorabilia that might link someone to the defeated Nationalists were destroyed," Easterbrook said. "Anything that survived was destroyed in the anti-rightist campaigns and the Cultural Revolution."<sup>84</sup>

Indo-US Relations

(March 16-22, 2015)

- Foreign Secretary Jaishankar: India-US relations have entered a new era; It is great time to be in India for American corporates: US diplomat.

India and the United States have entered a "new era" in the field of doing business and the attention deficit which plagued the relations has now been done away with, S. Jaishankar, Foreign Secretary, said on March 16. Delivering a talk on 'India-US 2015: Partnership for peace and security', he said much of the obstructions, which prevented the two countries from engaging in the field of commerce, had now been done away with. The two-day conference has been jointly organised by the Confederation of Indian Industry and Vivekandana International Foundation, among others. Fast forwarding to present, Jaishankar said that if people were overly anchored in the past, then they will not see the opportunities which exist between the two countries but cautioned that if the expectations were overstated then there was the "risk of coming up short", he said, adding that this creates its "own backlash". He added that India needs to be careful as to how "position and manage" the relationship.<sup>85</sup>

In the wake of improved ties between India and US, it is a great time for American corporates to be in Asia's third largest economy, a diplomat said on March 20. Earlier, there was a sense of frustration among the US businessmen about challenges in the Indian market but things have improved after the Modi government expressed commitment to boost bilateral trade and took several initiatives to attract investments, Thomas Vajda, US Consul General in Mumbai, told reporters in Panaji, India. In the past, there were challenges in terms of regulatory mechanism, licencing, intellectual property rights, taxation and amount of ownership that US companies can have in India, Vajda said. "We have seen a year of deepening of bilateral ties that included Prime Minister Modi's successful visit to Washington, a steady stream of US Cabinet members coming to India, and President Obama's historic visit to New Delhi as the chief guest for Republic Day," the envoy said.<sup>86</sup>

- Russia doubles number of troops taking part in mass drills to 80,000; Sweden to order two new submarines to boost its armed forces.

Reports say that Russia has doubled the number of troops taking part in mass drills ordered by President Vladimir Putin this week to 80,000. The drills are seen as a major show of strength by Russia amid tensions with the West over Ukraine. Putin had previously ordered drills for more than 40,000 troops in regions spanning the country, from the Arctic to the Far East to the volatile southern Caucasus, and ordered nuclear bomber jets to be deployed in Crimea a year after its annexation by Russia. The number of aircraft participating in the drill has also increased to 220. The drills are the latest in a succession of large-scale military manoeuvres that Russia has ordered as relations with the West have plunged to a post-Cold War low over the crisis in Ukraine.<sup>89</sup>

Meanwhile, according to reports, Sweden would order two new submarines to boost its armed forces months after a futile hunt for a suspected Russian mini-sub in the Stockholm archipelago. Although no Swedish official ever identified the nationality of the elusive mini-sub – experts widely believed it to be Russian. The failure to locate the sub raised questions over the non-aligned country's military capabilities after years of cutbacks in the post-Cold War era. Underwater capacity is a central part of Sweden's defence in peace time, as well as during emergencies and war. The two new generation A 26 submarines to be produced by Swedish arms groups Saab have a maximum price tag of 8.2 billion kronor ($945 million, •886 million). They are set to be delivered by 2022 at the latest. Significantly, last week the Swedish government announced a 6.2 billion-kronor hike in defence spending largely focused on upgrading its capacity to detect and intercept submarines.<sup>90</sup>

Jammu & Kashmir

(March 9-15, 2015)

- Pak High Commissioner meets Hurriyat leader Geelani; Masarat Alam's release; Centre issues a strong advisory to J&K; J&K government approves 3,000 posts for Kashmiri Pandits; Mufti government withdraws controversial circular on state flag; Centre seeks J&K views on interlocutors' report.

Pakistan High Commissioner Abdul Basit on March 9 met Kashmir separatist leader Syed Ali Shah Geelani. According to sources, Basit apprised Geelani on the issues discussed during the visit of Jaishankar last week, seven months after India had cancelled the Indo-Pak dialogue over the Pakistan High Commissioner's consultations with Kashmiri separatists. With BJP-PDP government in Jammu & Kashmir, they also discussed the political developments in the state. Basit also invited him for the Pakistan Day on March 23.<sup>91</sup>

Prime Minister Narendra Modi on March 9 denounced the release of hardline separatist leader Masarat Alam by the Jammu and Kashmir government of which BJP is a partner, saying he shared the "outrage" over the unacceptable decision and would take whatever action is required. Modi spoke in Lok Sabha as members from various political parties created an uproar over the development, terming it as "anti-national" and dangerous to the country's integrity, and dared BJP to pull out of the Mufti Mohammad Sayeed-led government. Asserting that the release of the separatist leader was not acceptable, he said the Centre has sought clarifications from the state government and will act after the response is received.<sup>92</sup> Unfazed by the controversy over the release of separatist Masarat Alam, Peoples Democratic Party (PDP) on March 10 said the decision to release hardline separatist leader Masarat Alam was taken during the Governor's rule in J&K.<sup>93</sup> Issuing a strong advisory to Jammu & Kashmir government in the context of separatist Masarat Alam's release, the Centre on March 14 has asked the state to put the leader of the 2010 protests in the valley under surveillance and detain him if anything adverse was found. It has also asked the state to vigorously pursue all the 27 criminal cases registered against him and challenge his bail orders.<sup>94</sup>

The Jammu & Kashmir government on March 10 approved 3,000 supernumerary posts to Kashmiri pandit migrants under the Prime Minister's package in the Valley. In this regard, Minister for law, justice and parliamentary affairs and relief and rehabilitation, Syed Basharat Bukhari has directed the relief commissioner to collect data of migrant unemployed youth who are registered as Kashmiri migrants in Jammu or outside the state besides enjoining the youth to submit their details within a period of 20 days. While taking stock of the relief and rehabilitation measures for Kashmiri migrants, the minister directed the reconstitution of the Apex Advisory Committee (AAC), an apex body of representatives of Kashmiri migrants, who migrated from the Valley.<sup>95</sup>

Under fire from political parties, the Mufti Mohammad Sayeed government on March 13 withdrew the controversial circular asking constitutional authorities to maintain the sanctity of the state flag, saying it was not approved by a "competent authority". The government said appropriate administrative action will be taken after enquiry into the circumstances leading to the issuing of this circular. Mufti government, on March 12, had issued a circular asking all constitutional authorities to maintain the sanctity of the state flag, at all costs, as is being done in respect of the Union Flag.<sup>96</sup>

The Centre has sent a reminder to the PDP-BJP government in J&K to clear its stand on the report by the three-member Interlocutors Group, which recommended special status to the state, amendment of the Armed Forces Special Powers Act (AFSPA), release of political prisoners detained under the Public Safety Act and a judicial commission to supervise the identification of bodies buried in the unmarked graves. The move could upset ties between the PDP and BJP as they are not on the same page on many of the recommendations. The J&K Interlocutors Group, which had academician Radha Kumar, journalist Dileep Padgaonkar and former Information Commissioner M M Ansari as members, had submitted its report in May 2012.<sup>97</sup>

but the Ministry of Home Affairs (MHA) has made it clear that there would be no slackening of the operations till the top leaders of the outfit fall in the security net. Highly placed sources in the MHA told The Assam Tribune on March 8 that though around 200 hardcore cadres, over ground workers and sympathizers of the NDFB(S) have been nabbed so far, the operations would continue till the top leaders of the militant group are arrested. The chairman of the outfit, IK Songbijit, along with several other leaders, are still in Myanmar and though some movements of the Myanmar Army were reported from the area, where most of the militants are taking shelter, no full-scale operation has yet been launched.<sup>98</sup>

In one of the biggest shocks for the Meghalaya Police, 4 policemen, including a Sub Inspector (SI), were killed in an ambush allegedly by cadres belonging to the Garo National Liberation Army (GNLA) led by its commander-in-chief Sohan D Shira. The incident happened at about 10.30 am on March 10 when the police team was on its way from Rongara to district headquarter Baghmara, about 135 kms from Tura town. SI Sombatsing Sangma and his team were attacked by about 25-30 GNLA cadres near the Panda Reserve Forest, about 12 kms from Rongara.<sup>99</sup> Meanwhile, a day after the killing of four policemen, the Garo National Liberation Army (GNLA) has welcomed the proposal for talks, on the condition that the Meghalaya Government is serious in its offer. Governor Keshari Nath Tripathi had in his first address to the State Assembly on March 9 made an offer for conditional talks to the outfit and HNLC on the condition that the outfits eschew violence and give up their anti-national stance.<sup>100</sup>

Three persons were killed on the spot and 23 others injured, when a powerful bomb exploded at Imphal market complex around 6 pm on March 11. The injured were taken to Regional Institute of Medical Science Hospital for treatment, where condition of some was stated to be serious. No individual or group has claimed responsibility for the blast so far, sources said, adding that two of the victims were non-Manipuri persons.<sup>101</sup>

The counter-insurgency operations in Assam gave another major jolt to the militant groups as nine militants belonging to the Songbijit faction of the National Democratic Front of Boroland (NDFB), Karbi People's Liberation Tigers (KPLT) and Muslim Liberation Tigers of Assam (MULTA) were arrested in different operations on March 11, while two members of the United Achik Liberation Army (UALA) surrendered.<sup>102</sup>

In a report to the Home Ministry, the Nagaland Government said Khan had given a statement to the police after his arrest on February 24 that he had paid Rs 5,000 to the alleged rape victim after they had sex twice. According to the report, Khan had also told the police that the girl went with him on her own free will and had demanded more money from him after the sexual encounters, which he had refused. An FIR of rape was filed soon after. "It appears on the basis of Khan's confession, that it was not rape but consensual sex," a Home Ministry official quoted the Nagaland government report as stating.<sup>103</sup>

(March 9-15, 2015)

- Diseases, not Maoists, kill most CRPF men in Maoist areas; Maoists regrouping in Bengal's Junglemahal; Jharkhand Police claims to kill five Maoists in Gumla district; Turf war among Maoists likely to turn bloodier; Police arrested a hardcore Maoist, seized 3,000 gelatin rods in Bihar; Jharkhand gears up for psychological warfare against Maoists; 11 Maoists surrender in Chhattisgarh.

For the largest security force fighting Naxalites in dense jungles of Chhattisgarh, Jharkhand and Bihar, the biggest enemy is not a gun-toting rebel, but various diseases. Latest government data shows that more CRPF men have died due to malaria and heart attack than have fallen to Maoist attacks in the 106 Naxal-affected districts in the country. According to data released by the home ministry, in 2014, while 50 CRPF men died in Maoist attacks, 95 died due to various diseases. Of these 27 fell to malaria, while 35 died due to heart attack. In 2015 too, nine CRPF men have lost the battle to various diseases as against two to Maoists. The data exposes the poor working conditions for jawans in Naxal areas and lack of medical care.<sup>105</sup>

Nearly four years after Maoist leader Kishenji was gunned down in an encounter in West Bengal's Junglemahal area, Maoists have started trickling back into the forest-covered terrain of the state. According to inputs by both Central and state agencies, a number of top Maoist leaders from Bengal and Jharkhand have been spotted making their way into villages. Security agencies have received inputs from ground-level sources that in the last few days, regional commanders and leaders such as Bikash, Shyamal and Ranjit Pal have been spotted in the area. They have also been in touch with some known associates in villages along the Bengal-Jharkhand border. Sources further said that a group of rebels, under the leadership of Madan Mahato, commander of the Belpahari region in Purulia, was spotted in the Ranibandh area of Bankura three weeks back.<sup>106</sup>

At least one suspected Maoist was killed in an encounter with the security forces in Jharkhand's Gumla district on March 13. The police, however, claimed they have killed four-five rebels. Maoist sources said the man who was killed was part of a People's Liberation Guerrilla Army team, reportedly en route to provide assistance to a larger group fighting a pitched battle against the security forces since February 20. Jharkhand's most-wanted Maoist Deo Kumar Singh is reportedly injured. Police said they do not have any information on Singh alias Arvindji, CPI (Maoist) central committee and military commission member. The Maoist sources, however, confirmed that Singh suffered a bullet injury to his leg on February 20 and was still in Gumla. Arvindji and his team were reportedly moving from Chhattisgarh to Latehar, when they were ambushed by members of another Left-wing extremist group Jharkhand Jan Mukti Parishad. The JJMP allegedly retains good relationship with the Intelligence Bureau, which did not keep the state police in the loop about the ambush.<sup>107</sup>

With TPC, a splinter group of CPI (Maoist), threatening to indulge in more violence and Maoists' well-known eye-for-eye principle, the ongoing turf war between the different sects of the "gun religion" is going to be bloodier in the days to come. On March 11, TPC squad gunned down Jaglal Ganju, said to be an area commander of the CPI (Maoists). Virtually throwing an open challenge to the parent organization, the TPC left behind a hand note near the slain's body. Besides owning the killing of the Maoist area commander, the TPC note threatened more such killings. Acknowledging Jaglal's assassination as a retaliatory action, the TPC note said the score was yet not fully settled and the Maoists will have to pay for their acts through the lives of its cadre. Maoists, on their part, allege that TPC enjoyed police patronage as the forces engaged in anti-Naxal operation encouraged and helped TPC to engage in a proxy war with the Maoists. Though senior police officers formally deny the Maoist allegation that TPC enjoyed police support, the war within the extra-large Naxal umbrella brings good news to the forces engaged in anti-Naxal operations as it weakens the enemy.<sup>108</sup>

Police have arrested a hardcore Maoist and seized 3,000 gelatin rods, 7,000 detonators, some carbines and a big consignment of ammonium nitrate on March 14 from near a village in Bihar's Rohtas district, an officer said. Jharkhand state will raise a dedicated police team for waging psychological warfare against Maoists, a top official said, indicating a proactive policy shift in the Raghubar Das government's tactics against left-wing rebels. Besides, the state will also set up special investigation teams (SITs) – both at state and district/range levels – for dealing with important extremism-related cases, according to an order issued by the state director general of police DK Pandey.<sup>110</sup>

At least 11 Maoists, including a female cadre, surrendered to security forces in Chhattisgarh on March 14. Among the surrendered Maoists many carried rewards on them. "It is a matter of joy that by the collaborative effort of Telangana police and Bijapur police at least 11 Maoists have decided to leave Naxalism and adopt the mainstream lifestyle," said Inspector General, S.R.P. Kalluri. Meanwhile, a hardcore Maoist was killed in two-hour long encounter with police in Jharkhand's Sargaon region.
