- Afghanistan, China preparing to sign Silk Road accord; Former NSA warns political stability under threat.

China Ambassador to Afghanistan Yao Jing on March 23 asked the Afghan government to finalise the draft agreement on the Silk Road project and hand it over to his country for a review. The agreement after being finalised by both the countries would be signed during Chief Executive Officer (CEO) Abdullah Abdullah's visit to China. A statement from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs (MoFA) said the Chinese envoy met with Foreign Minister Salahuddin Rabbani. The envoy assured his country was ready to host CEO Abdullah on his official visit and hoped the agreement would be signed soon between the two countries.

Jing also extended invitation to Rabbani to attend the Conference on Interaction and Confidence Building Measures in Asia (CICA) scheduled for late April, 2016. Rabbani assured that work on finalizing the Silk Road project agreement was underway in coordination with the ministries concerned and it would be completed and shared with China in the near future. He also said an Afghan delegation would participate in the CICA foreign ministerial conference. Afghanistan and China share an 85-km border in Wakhan area of northeastern Badakhshan province. Both Zebak and Wakhan districts border Pakistan, Tajikistan and China.¹

Former national security advisor Dr. Rangin Dadfar Spanta has said inappropriate policies of the incumbent government had raised concerns about political instability and fear of escalation in war. Also a former foreign minister, Spanta said he would render all possible sacrifices but would not allow the Pakistani establishment to influence Afghanistan's foreign policy or meddle in its internal affairs. Speaking at the residence of Mohammad Ismail Khan, former jihadi leader and minister on March 28 night, he alleged most achievements of the past decades had been reversed over the last two years by the unity government.

Ismail Khan had invited key members of the Karzai administration to dinner at his home in Herat City, the capital of western Herat province. Spanta assailed the Ghani-led government and countries such as the United States for following weak and ambiguous policies. As a consequence, he said the sitting government had weakened and there were concerns about political instability. He said the nation had rendered sacrifices for liberating the country from Soviet and British occupation. In case of need, he added, the Afghans would defend their motherland and frustrate Islamabad's meddling.²

- Development projects unacceptable if Baloch do not benefit, military diverge over Punjab operation authority; Iran criticises ‘undignified’ remarks.

Balochistan National Party-Mengal (BNP-M) chief Sardar Akhtar Jan Mengal said on March 20 that his party would not accept development projects in Balochistan if they failed to benefit people of the province. Addressing a public meeting in Lasbela, he claimed that outsiders were the main beneficiaries of projects being initiated in the name of development of Balochistan. He said that if people of Balochistan remained deprived of their legitimate rights such development projects would be seen as contributing to their misery. Mr Mengal said it was painful to see that those who had violated the constitution of the country were free, but those demanding their rights were treated as traitors. Criticising the government for letting former military ruler Pervez Musharraf leave the country, he said the champions of democracy should tell the nation why a dictator who was facing a treason case had been allowed to go abroad.³

Laying bare their differences over the army’s involvement in a crackdown on extremist and militant organisations in Punjab, the government and military spokesmen, at a joint press conference on March 29, diverged over who could decide about engaging the army. Although the press conference was convened to release a video recording of confessional statement made by captured Indian spy Kulbhushan Yadav, the very first question about the government permitting a military operation in Punjab exposed the gap in the positions of the civilian and military leadership on the issue. Information Minister Pervaiz Rashid, who is also federal government’s spokesman, said it was the provincial government’s prerogative to decide “which force and how much of the force” would be required to act against a group or a person found by intelligence agencies to be involved in terrorism. He said the provincial administration took decision on the basis of intelligence available to it about the nature and extent of threat. “If they think necessary they can get the job done through police ... at other places Rangers may have to be involved while in more difficult situations services of the Pakistan Army can also be requisitioned,” he maintained.⁴

Iran on March 31 criticized elements in Pakistan for spreading undignified and offensive remarks attributed to President Hassan Rouhani regarding arrest of RAW agent. Abbas Badrifar, a spokesman for Iran’s Embassy in Islamabad, said spreading of such remarks and news items were product of thinking which does not like further expansion of ties between the two countries. “Elements unhappy over promotion of ties between the two Islamic countries of Iran and Pakistan are trying in various ways, including the spreading of undignified and sometimes offensive contents, to fade out the significant achievements during the visit of President Rouhani to Pakistan,” he said. “Iran wants a stable Pakistan. Iran has never felt danger from Pakistan at its border,” the spokesman said. Badrifar further said such tactics would not impact the positive views of the two countries regarding each other.” Pakistan has written a letter to Iran and sought Tehran’s assistance to help investigate the activities of Indian spy Kulbhushan Yadav, detained by Pakistani authorities

ASEAN and Czech Republic will work together to utilise the vast potential both sides have in common, mentioned H.E. Ivan Hotěk, the new Czech Ambassador to ASEAN. Ambassador Hotěk further said that the Czech Republic will also encourage collaboration between ASEAN and the European Union as well as within ASEAN. Secretary-General Minh elaborated that ASEAN and the Czech Republic could further work on areas including trade and investment. Secretary-General Minh and Ambassador Hotěk also deliberated on promising ways to further stimulate business-to-business cooperation. Indonesia seems to be angry with China's actions on Natuna Islands and declared that it may approach the international court to prevent China from being more assertive in its territorial claims. This happened as Indonesia tried to block a Chinese fishing boat that was illegally (according to Indonesian officials) in Natuna Islands and detained eight Chinese fishermen. China, however, objected to it and later claimed that the Chinese fishermen be released as they were fishing in 'traditional Chinese water'.³⁸

More than 100 Chinese fishing boats and ships were found traversing in Malaysian waters illegally. The Royal Malaysian Navy and Malaysian Maritime Enforcement Agency were looking into the matter and sent bombardier aircraft to fly that area in order to examine whether the Chinese boats and ships encroached into Malaysian Exclusive Economic Zone. The Prime Minister's office mentioned that, proper actions will be taken if those boats and ships were found guilty by having trespassed into Malaysian territory.³⁹

Chinese Foreign Ministry Spokesperson Hua Chunying mentioned that Philippines' action to go against China in the international court is illegal and unlawful. She continued, "Its (Philippines') stubbornness is clearly the result of behind-the-scenes instigation and political manoeuvring. China is surely not going to humour such a political farce." Clearly she was referring to the US while mentioning about instigating Manila. This came as a response against US diplomat Daniel Russel's comment that the forthcoming decision by the international tribunal on the arbitration case brought by the Philippines would bring "rules-based" future in the region. Hua Chunying further mentioned that US itself is not a part of the UNCLOS, but speaks about stability in South China Sea through international law and order.⁴⁰

Malaysia's former Prime Minister Mahathir Mohammad has sued the present PM Najib Razak for his alleged involvement in the state fund 1MDB. Mahathir Mohammad has accused Mr. Razak of stealing $681m from the 1MDB and prevented the law and judiciary from taking appropriate action against him. The attorney general of Malaysia has already given a clean chit to Mr. Razak and the prime minister also has denied all allegations. His office maintains that the money in question in Najib's personal accounts came as a gift from the Royal Saudi family and not from 1MDB. During his tenure, Mr. Mahathir Mohammad was accused of arbitrary arrests and restrictions on media; allegations that are now troubling the Najib government as well. However, Mahathir Mohammad is now trying to unseat the present government and is involved in anti-Najib movement. He was part of a rally which was organised in protest of Najib's government in downtown Kuala Lumpur. He has also resigned from his post in UMNO, a political body that was made extremely powerful during his tenure and which still enjoys an extra-ordinary role in Malaysian politics. In response, Najib side-lined Mahathir from the politics and the police have questioned him over one defamation case brought by the present prime minister. In between Mahathir has also tried to topple the present government in the parliament by a zero-confidence vote.⁴²

A poll conducted by state-run VTsIOM has sated, on March 25, that the majority of Russians support President Vladimir Putin's decision to withdraw "the main part" of the military from Syria. Only 7 per cent of respondents do not agree with the president's decision to withdraw, while 84 percent were in support of the military agenda in Syria. More than three quarters of respondents – 78 percent – agree that Russian forces achieved their objectives in Syria. The survey was conducted during March 19-20 – 1,600 respondents were interviewed at 130 sampling points in 46 Russian regions and republics. The statistical error does not exceed 3.5 percent.⁴⁵

President Vladimir Putin has shown his support for Chechen leader Ramzan Kadyrov by appointing him acting head of Chechnya until the September 2016 elections, by a decree signed on March 25. Earlier, the head of the Committee for Prevention of Torture Igor Kalyapin had said that 'Kadyrov, unfortunately, can't be replaced now. The system needs to be rebuilt first, which would take two or three years at least – that is if someone even wants to do it, which does not look to be the case'.⁴⁶

The Russian Investigative Committee is close to proving that the Yukos oil company was acquired illegally by its shareholders. This was stated by Committee spokesman Vladimir Markin on March 25. Markin added that the 1995 privatization of Yukos violated anti-trust and competition law and that Mikhail Khodorkovsky, former co-owner and CEO of Yukos, acquired the company through shell companies JSC Laguna and JSC Reagent that were declared to be independent legal entities, but in fact belonged to Khodorkovsky. The Yukos shares were paid for using the funds of joint-stock bank Menatep – founded by Khodorkovsky – which belonged to the customers and investors of Menatep. The money was not returned and, a few years later, the bank was declared bankrupt, therefore the funds were actually stolen. The shares were subsequently transferred between companies, all of which were controlled by Khodorkovsky. In July 2014, Yukos shareholders were awarded an unprecedented $50 billion in damages by the Permanent Court of Arbitration in The Hague, after a ruling that Russian authorities had subjected Yukos to politically motivated attacks. Russia has not paid the compensation and refuses to recognize the court's authority.⁴⁷

This compares to fifty seven percent of respondents who said last year they would like Putin to win the 2018 election. The number of Russians who would like to see another person succeed Putin as president in 2018 stood at 22 percent this year, compared to 25 percent in February 2015. The poll was conducted during March 11-14 among 1,600 people in 137 Russian cities and towns, via personal interviews in respondents' homes. The poll gave a margin of error of 3.4 percentage points or less.⁴⁸

Rosneft's Vice President Mikhail Leontyev has said, on March 24, that the company hopes to be backed by the Energy Minister in receiving access to gas exports via a single export channel. He stated 'we want to be allowed to sell gas to our consumers, which are not identical to Gazprom customers. They are ready to buy our gas, which contradicts nothing but Gazprom's position'.⁴⁹

A Soyuz-2.1a carrier rocket that took off from the Plesetsk space centre on March 24 has successfully delivered a military satellite into orbit. This is the second launch of the Soyuz-2 carrier rocket from the Plesetsk cosmodrome this year. Last year, Soyuz-2a carrier rockets were launched from the Plesetsk space centre five times while Rokot rockets blasted off from the cosmodrome on two occasions.⁵⁰

A new fully armed and equipped motorized infantry division will be deployed in Russia's southern Rostov Region by the end of this year. As such, three military garrisons are to be built in the Rostov region to accommodate the personnel. The division's strength will total about 10,000 officers. Its headquarters will be stationed in the Rostov-on-Don. The unit will boast the newest weaponry, armour, trucks and special vehicles. The cost of accommodating the newly-formed mechanized infantry division will total at least five billion roubles - US$ 700 million. Meanwhile, Foreign Minister Lavrov stated that the two countries remain divided over global security matters. This includes missile defence, treaty on the elimination of intermediate and shorter-range missiles (INF Treaty) and NATO expansion. stressed on the need to break the deadlock in the Palestinian-Israeli settlement. He stated ‘the main thing is that we have agreed to intensify the dialogue and make it more substantive in nature and make it stable so that to try to settle these questions, we agreed to continue contacts on all these and other issues on our common agenda’.

U.S. Secretary of State Kerry stated that ‘Washington is keen to get back to normal in its dialogue with Moscow and sees progress here. President Putin has been very gracious to spend time with me when I’ve come here and to work at trying to find a solution to very complicated issues. I think that Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov and I have had a very productive relationship and we’ve been able to separate differences and work together in a very effective way’. He added that their joint efforts on the ceasefire in Syria have had an impact – ‘it’s been very positive, and that’s the way we can build back to a much stronger, more effective relationship’. Kerry rounded off the interactions by stating ‘we’re actually very pleased that Russia is concerned about that extremism and wants to fight against Daesh and other extremists. So the key here is to find clarity in our definitions, make sure we’re really working effectively together without hidden agenda in a way that can rapidly destroy Daesh, push back against the violent extremism, restore peace and stability to the region’.⁵⁵

Russian Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov has said, on March 23, that Europe must set aside “geopolitical games” in the face of terrorism. Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov has said, on March 23, that any attempts to undermine the Minsk agreements on Ukraine’s conflict settlement should be prevented. He stated ‘France and Germany, when we met in Paris not long ago in the Normandy four format at the level of foreign ministers, called for indicating a tentative date for holding those local elections in Donbass that are viewed by many as a key at this point element of the fulfilment of Minsk-2. We were ready to support this proposal. Germany proposed June-July for holding such elections, but the proposal was not supported by the Ukrainian side. And just recently I’ve read a statement by the leadership of the Central Election Commission of Ukraine that says that it will be possible to begin the discussion on holding such elections no earlier than in two years. It’s an interesting signal. I fully agree that the Minsk-2 accords cannot be revised and attempts at their undermining should be prevented. We actively support the efforts exerted by Germany together with France for preserving the ‘Normandy format. We are also in favour of this’.⁵⁷

Russian Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Maria Zakharova has said, on March 24, that Turkey should abandon its attempts to push for establishment of the so-called security zones in Syria. He stated 'the Afghans are interested in cooperation with Russia in the military-technical sphere. Russia is prepared to provide such assistance, but in practice this runs against a number of obstacles. One of the main ones is the actual ban by Afghanistan's foreign financial donors, the US in the first place, on spending the funds provided to Kabul to purchase the necessary weapons and other military gear from Russia. In a situation like this Afghanistan may get military-technical assistance from Russia only if it agrees to provide it on the disinterested basis'.⁶¹

The Crown Prince stated that 'indeed, as you said, trade has fallen, but that is why we came to Moscow. We are in Moscow because Moscow plays a serious role in the Middle East. We attach great importance to continuous dialogue both on the further development of our bilateral relations and on the ways of enhancing stability in the Middle East. Russian and Indian Defence Ministers, Sergey Shoigu and Manohar Parrikar respectively, have discussed the lease of a second nuclear submarine to India. While discussing military-technical cooperation between the two countries during a telephone conversation on March 23, the two ministers agreed to work out details for the transfer, on a leasing agreement, of a second nuclear-powered submarine (NPS) to the Indian Navy. The next round of talks is scheduled for April, when an Indian military delegation is expected to come to Moscow and meet with representatives of Rosoboronexport and the United Shipbuilding Corporation (USC).⁶⁸

During a press conference with Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif in the Pakistani capital, Islamabad, Rouhani said that the two countries are resolved not to allow extremist and terrorist groups threaten their shared border security. The Iranian president said the two countries' security is intertwined and interdependent, adding that more efforts are needed to boost security along Iran's eastern and Pakistan's western border.

He added that the two countries are "close to each other culturally," and must also focus on cultural cooperation. Rouhani said issues of mutual interest, the economic sector and potentialities that exist for the development of economic relations, including in the energy issue, gas as well as electricity exports were discussed during the meeting with the Pakistani premier. UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon expressed his surprise at the victories achieved by the Iraqi security forces, while offered his condolences to the families of al-Iskandariya Stadium bombing's victims. Ki-moon also called the international and regional partners to provide support and assistance to Iraq in its war against terrorism. Ban Ki-moon said during a joint press conference with Iraqi Prime Minister Haider al-Abadi, World Bank President Jim Yong Kim and the President of the Islamic Development Bank Ahmed Mohammed Ali in Baghdad and followed by IraqiNews.com, "It was a pleasure to visit Baghdad for the eighth time as Secretary-General of the United Nations," indicating that, "In the past ten years, I have seen Iraqis endure very difficult times, and throughout these ten years, I have witnessed first-hand the indomitable spirit and resilience of the Iraqi people."⁷⁰

The Iraqi Cleric Muqtada al-Sadr entered the Green Zone in the centre of Baghdad, which includes many government offices, as well as the parliament, American and British embassies. Sadr said in a statement, "Today we are at the entrance of the Green Zone and tomorrow we will be within it." Iraqi Cleric Muqtada al-Sadr revealed his intention to protest inside the Green Zone as a show of discontent with the government's slow pace of carrying out reforms. Sadr's office ensured the sit-ins will remain peaceful and called the supporters of the Sadrist movement to abide by the rules and order.⁷¹

There has been wide rejection of the proposal of putting in place a federal system in north of Syria over the past few days as it impinges on the Syrian state's unity and it has nothing to do with the destiny of the Kurds. The national unity gathering in Qameshli city, which includes hundreds of intellectuals and representatives of civil society and popular organizations, stressed that the plan of federalism in Syria's north serves the ISIS, the al-Nusra Front and the world Zionism. It denounced the plan declared by what it described as some persons representing themselves only, adding that the Syrian Arab army is the only guarantee for eliminating terrorism. The gathering called on clergymen, popular organizations and clans in Hasaka province to confront the plan that poses a

In a statement to journalists following the talks session, al-Jaafari said that the delegation explained to de Mistura the dangers that arise from the actions of certain states, some of them members of the Security Council, who support and train terrorism and export to Syria through Turkey under various nomenclatures, SANA reported. Government officials castigated the High Court of Justice decision that put the brakes on a controversial natural gas deal, even as opposition lawmakers – who led the petition against the accord – celebrated the development as a victory for the public. Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, who had spearheaded efforts to seal the deal between the state and gas companies, said the ruling “threatens the development of Israel’s gas reserves. Israel is regarded as a state with excessive judicial intervention, which makes it difficult to do business.” In its decision, the High Court declared that the deal to extract offshore natural gas would be cancelled within a year unless a central tenet of the agreement, preventing future governments from altering the terms, is significantly changed or cancelled.⁷⁴

The Palestinian Authority decided to halt imports from five major Israeli food production companies into the occupied Palestinian territory. In a statement released after the weekly cabinet meeting, the Palestinian government said the decision came in response to an Israeli ban on products from five Palestinian companies earlier this month. According to the statement, products from the Tnuva, Strauss, Tara, Soglowek and Tapuzina companies will be banned from entering the Palestinian territory. It added that the relevant authorities have been instructed “to put the decision into effect after giving Palestinian merchants enough time to sell the products stocked in their stores.”⁷⁵

Kuwait is free from radioactive waste, a test of samples of soil, air and water taken from various parts of the country indicates. “These radiation detectors, which operate around the clock at dozens of observatories and the 12 early warning stations across the country, produced no data of abnormal radiation levels,” Fadhel Ali Ghuloum, director of the Health Ministry’s department on radiation prevention said. “The daily readings of particle detectors showed no indication of radioactive pollution or harmful substances in the areas allocated for residential or agricultural purposes,” Ghuloum told Kuwait News Agency (Kuna). Ghuloum said the laboratories of the department on radiation prevention regularly analyse the air, soil and water samples on daily and weekly bases to verify that they are free from any pollutants.⁷⁶

A Kuwaiti official has denied any mediation role by his country in the standoff between Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) countries and Iran. Earlier this month, a Kuwaiti daily reported that Mahmoud Alavi, the Iranian minister of intelligence, visited Kuwait and handed over to leaders there a written message from President Hassan Rouhani pertaining to relations with the GCC countries and an earnest desire to reach a settlement on regional issues without any foreign interference. The GCC, established in 1981, is made up of Bahrain, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates. Kuwait has conveyed to the GCC leaders the purported wish expressed by Iran’s leaders to start a new chapter in its relations with the Gulf countries based on the principle of “settling pending issues through a quiet dialogue, Gulf diplomats said. However, Nasser Al Mezyen, Kuwait’s Assistant Foreign Minister for GCC Affairs, said that Kuwait was not assuming any mediation role.⁷⁷

DoD's special envoy for Guantanamo detention closure, Paul M. Lewis, said on Capitol Hill on March 23 that significant numbers of Defence Department and senior military leaders say closing the Naval Station Guantanamo Bay detention facility in Cuba is the single most important action the United States can take to counter terrorism. Lewis and the State Department's special envoy for Guantanamo closure, Lee Wolosky, discussed in a House Foreign Affairs Committee hearing the reasons President Barack Obama plans to close the detainee camp. The president and his national security team have determined closing the detention facility is a "bipartisan national security imperative," Lewis said. The president has repeatedly said that the continued operation of the detention facility at Guantanamo "weakens our national security by damaging our relationships with key allies and partners, draining resources and providing violent extremists with a propaganda tool," he said.⁸²

Defence Secretary Ash Carter said on March 23 at the United States Military Academy that the Army officers of tomorrow likely will face complex challenges in protecting the nation and staying one step ahead of adversaries. Carter spoke to the corps of cadets at West Point, New York, telling the approximately 4,400 men and women they soon will be responsible for defending the United States and helping to secure the world. He said terrorism is among the five biggest evolving security challenges the United States is facing now. In the wake of the terrorist attacks in Brussels, the resolve of the United States is only strengthened to defeat terrorism, he added. The other global security challenges of concern are Russian aggression in Eastern Europe, a China that is acting aggressively, North Korea and Iran.⁸³

The development portion of the aircraft will end late next year and will transition to a modernization program. Production will grow from 45 aircraft in 2015 to more than 100 aircraft in 2018 and up to 145 aircraft per year by 2020, Bogdan said.⁸⁴

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Joseph F. Dunford Jr., told the House Armed Services Committee on March 22 that the United States military has not, and will not compromise training or equipping of any troops going into harm's way. Dunford was asked if American troops were endangered by a lack of training. The question came in wake of the death of a Marine in Iraq over the weekend. "Have we compromised training or other critical capabilities because of the force gap? I can tell you we haven't done that," the chairman told the congressmen. He said he routinely engages with Operation Inherent Resolve leaders to ensure that they have everything they need to ensure success. Dunford will be meeting soon with Inherent Resolve commander Army Lt. Gen. Sean McFarland, he said.⁸⁶

While not complacent about the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant's capabilities, Defence Department leaders are confident that momentum against the terror group is firmly in the hands of the coalition arrayed against it. Defence Secretary Ash Carter told the House Armed Services Committee on March 22 that "As far as the campaign is ... concerned, I'm confident that we will defeat ISIL and that we have the momentum of the campaign in Iraq and Syria". ISIL claimed responsibility for yesterday's attacks in Brussels, Belgium, that killed 31 and wounded more than 190 people in the city's airport and the rapid transit system. An American airman and his family were among those hurt. Carter told the lawmakers that DoD will continue to look for opportunities to accelerate operations against ISIL.⁸⁷

Defence Secretary Carter said on March 25 that the U.S. military killed several key Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) terrorists this week, including a senior ISIL leader and finance minister who led certain external affairs and plots. During a Pentagon press briefing, joined by Dunford,

Carter said the coalition is systematically eliminating ISIL's cabinet, including Haji Imam. Carter said Imam is the second senior ISIL leader the coalition has killed this month. Earlier this month defence officials confirmed the death of ISIL's so-called minister of war, Abu Omar al-Shishani, known as Omar the Chechen.⁸⁸

Dunford said on March 25 that to accelerate operations against the ISIL, it may be necessary to send more U.S. service members to Iraq. He told the Pentagon press corps that in the coming weeks DoD will present to President Barack Obama a series of recommendations to further enable support to the counter-ISIL forces. Dunford, who briefed the press alongside Defence Secretary Ash Carter, said they both “believe that there will be an increase to the U.S. forces in Iraq in the coming weeks, but that decision hasn’t been made.” Any decisions the president makes will be done in the broader context of what needs to happen to maintain momentum against ISIL, “and what specifically do we need to do to enable operations in Mosul,” the chairman said.⁸⁹

Combined Joint Task Force Operation Inherent Resolve officials reported on March 27 that U.S. and coalition military forces have continued to attack ISIL terrorists in Syria and Iraq. Attack and ground-attack aircraft conducted two strikes in Syria and 19 strikes in Iraq.⁹⁰

Pentagon Press Secretary Peter Cook said that defence Secretary Carter and Saudi Arabia's defence minister, Deputy Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman, affirmed the importance of the defence relationship between their nations during a phone call on March 24. In a statement summarizing the call, Cook said they also discussed the security environment in the Middle East, including ways to work together to strengthen cooperation on counterterrorism efforts. Carter welcomed Saudi Arabia's contributions to the coalition campaign to counter the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant, Cook said, and the pair discussed ways to expand their cooperation.⁹¹

- Centre extends Udaan Scheme till FY20; PoK becomes PoJK in MHA report; Two army jawans, civilian injured in grenade blast in Kashmir Valley.

The Centre has decided to extend the Udaan Scheme, a Special Industry Initiative for Jammu & Kashmir which provides exposure to the state's youth to the country's corporate sector, till 2019-20. The decision was taken at a meeting of the Cabinet Committee on Economic Affairs (CCEA) chaired by Prime Minister Narendra Modi on March 23. Udaan is a national integration scheme with the goal to mainstream J&K youth with rest of the country. The scheme not only provides skill enhancement and job opportunity but also leads to counter radicalisation and weaning away youth of J&K from militancy.⁹⁷

For the first time ever, an official document of the NDA government has referred to Pakistan Occupied Kashmir (PoK) as Pakistan Occupied Jammu and Kashmir (PoJK). The change is significant as it is in line with the Bharatiya Janata Party's narrative on unified Kashmir, although it was thus far restricted to party pamphlets and manifestos. The reference figures in the 2014-15 annual report of the Ministry of Home Affairs (MHA), which was tabled in Parliament. Under the sub-head "Cross LoC Trade between J&K and PoJK," the report says: Till December 2015, 45,486 trucks have crossed over to PoJK and 28,891 trucks have crossed over to India's side through these two routes – Srinagar-Muzaffarabad and Poonch-Rawalkote routes... Security clearance has been accorded for the visits of trade delegations from J&K to PoJK".⁹⁸

Two army jawans and a civilian were injured after unidentified militants lobbed a grenade on an army patrol party in south Kashmir's Anantnag district on March 26, police official said. Unidentified militants lobbed a grenade on an army patrol party at Goriwan in Bijbehara area of the district causing splinter injuries to two army jawans and a civilian, he said. Security forces have cordoned-off the area and a hunt has been launched to nab the militants, the official added.⁹⁹
