The unresolved issue of restoring the subsidy on wheat prices dominated the politics in Gilgit Baltistan during May 2014. Protesters from across the region gathered in Gilgit to put forward their demand to the government. The protests over the weeks gathered momentum to assume the shape of a full-fledged movement. The protesters threatened to block the Karakoram Highway. The Awami Action Committee (AAC), a coalition of nationalist, religious and political groups, is at the forefront steering the movement and organized a historic march as the demands were not met by the authorities.

The AAC representatives negotiated with the government authorities including the Federal Minister of Kashmir Affairs and Gilgit Baltistan (KAGB), Chaudhary Bargees Tahir, to resolve the issue. While popular protests continued, Bargees noted that the government is still giving Gilgit Baltistan a 73 percent subsidy on wheat prices. Before this, the AAC called for a shutter down strike and transport strike in Gilgit Baltistan to pressurize the government to meet their demands.

The issue of unresolved boundary between Kohistan and Diامر district of Gilgit Baltistan is noted to exacerbate during the grazing season. In February 2014, seven people died in clashes regarding the boundary issue between the residents of the two sides. The piece of land adjoining the Basari post (nearly 10 kilometer stretch) has been disputed between Kohistan and Gilgit Baltistan. The piece of land has been demarcated for the mega Diامر Bhasha dam project which has been delayed inordinately due to lack of funds. During summers, residents of Diامر take their livestock for grazing to this piece of land and it is feared that this could lead to clashes between the people.

Meanwhile, while the significance of the United States' (US) role in supporting the Diامر Bhasha dam project has been reiterated, US Ambassador to Pakistan, Richard Olson, paid a visit to the so called AJK. During this visit, he met president AJK, Sardar Yaqoob Khan and also local people. The visit was mainly to renew ties and emphasize US commitment to work towards betterment of the so called AJK.

“Ties between India and Pakistan flourish with faster clearance of transit permits”

ANI, April 22, 2014

POONCH: In a bid to strengthen ties with Pakistan, the transport department of the government of Jammu and Kashmir has welcomed the faster clearance of transit permits for the bus service to Pakistan occupied Kashmir (POK). Nostalgia ruled hearts when long separated cousins from both countries got to meet each other due to the regular bus service that has emerged out of strengthened bonds between the two countries. Citing confidence from both nations that is apparent in the faster clearance of permits, Custodian of Cross Line of Control (LOC) Travel, Chakan Da Bagh in Poonch district, Mohammed Bashir Lone, predicted flourishing ties.

Tariq Naqash, “Stranded Vietnamese man awaiting repatriation from AJK”

Dawn, April 3, 2014

GILGIT: The legislative assembly of Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) on March 11 enacted a special law to regularise nearly 180 contract employees of grade 1 onwards to grade 18.

MUZAFFARABAD: A man whose nationality could not be ascertained by law-enforcement agencies in Azad Jammu and Kashmir for months has finally been declared to be a Vietnamese citizen. Belonging to the Hmong ethnic minority of Vietnam, Vu Gia Po, who had earlier been wrongly referred to as Wu Ta Puma is desperately awaiting completion of procedural formalities for repatriation to his country. The 37-year old was kept in a police station in Athmuqam, district headquarters of Neelum valley, about 74 kilometres northeast of Muzaffarabad, in November 2013 and his hosts have since been finding it difficult to decide about their inadvertent guest. “We feel relieved that his birthplace has been traced and hopefully he will soon be reunited with his family,” SHO Athmuqam Mohammad Yasin noted on April 2. Po was taken into custody by the Military Intelligence (MI) from Sharda, in the upper belt of the valley that straddles the Line of Control, assuming that he might have sneaked into AJK from the J&K.

Tariq Naqash, “Nepotism continues in AJK legislative assembly”

Dawn, April 1, 2014

MUZAFFARABAD: Already faced with a contempt of court notice, for the alleged violation of the status quo, on inductions and postings in the Azad Jammu and Kashmir (AJK) Legislative Assembly secretariat, Speaker Sardar Ghulam Sadiq recently recruited a minister's brother in BPS-17. This induction is one of the several steps taken, by the Peoples' Party government in AJK, to woo the parliamentary party members, almost all of whom are holding ministerial positions, amid the renewed efforts to topple Prime Minister Chaudhry Abdul Majeed. Sources in the Legislative Assembly (LA) secretariat noted, on condition of anonymity, that Raja Daniyal Rathore, the brother of Raja Faisal Rathore, the minister for electricity, had been clandestinely recruited as a reporter in BPS-17.

“Fresh start: PPP looks to renew strategy prior to elections in G-B”

The Express Tribune, April 10, 2014

GILGIT: As elections in Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B)

draw closer, Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP) has formulated a strategy to rebuild the party's image that has been tarnished by allegations of corruption and illegal appointments. Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) Chief Minister Mehdi Shah recently met the party's co-chairperson Asif Ali Zardari at Bilawal House in Karachi to discuss the future of his party in G-B. “We are done with the strategy of turning the tables on our opponents,” claimed a senior leader of PPP, who spearheads the coalition government in G-B. Though PPP won with an overwhelming majority in the 2009 elections, it accommodated parties like Pakistan Muslim League-Quaid (PML-Q), Jamiat Ulema-e-Islam-Fazl (JUI-F) and Muttahida Qaumi Movement (MQM) in the government under Zardari's policy of reconciliation, making them part of the Mehdi Shah cabinet. “Given the scams of corruption and illegal appointments, followed by the 'media trial' of PPP, it became necessary for the party leadership to devise a plan to turn challenges into opportunities,” stated the senior leader, requesting anonymity. Over the years, the PPP government came under repeated criticism, even from its own lawmakers, including Wazir Baig and Mohammad Naseer. Last year, Baig demanded setting up the National Accountability Bureau in G-B to investigate the alleged corruption of ministers.

Shabbir Mir, “Job security: G-B governor yet to sign 'controversial' regularisation act”

The Express Tribune, April 9, 2014

GILGIT: The fate of nearly 180 employees of the Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) government hangs in the balance as the G-B Contract Employees Regularisation of Service Act, 2014 is yet to be endorsed by the governor. The act was unanimously passed by the G-B Assembly on March 11 and calls for the regularisation of contract employees of the government from basic pay scale 1 to 18. Tabling the bill in the house, Law Minister Ali Madad Sher had stated the law would only be applicable to those government servants who fulfilled required protocols during their induction.

“Of those 180 employees, some have fulfilled the required protocol while many others haven't. Their services will not be made permanent,” stated an official privy to the matter. He added that there are elements in the government that want to regularise all government posts under the garb of the act. However, up till now, Governor Pir Karam Ali Shah has declined to sign the act, which will then make it part of the legislation and thus binding on the government. According to officials, if the law is signed by the governor, many other employees of the government will also benefit from it.

Shabbir Mir, “Making cuts: G-B works dept officials face demotion over illegal appointments”

The Express Tribune, April 22, 2014

GILGIT: At least two senior engineers from Gilgit-Baltistan's (G-B) Works Department may be demoted for ignoring protocol and wrongfully awarding public positions. Superintendent Engineer Wazir Tajwar and Executive Engineer Nazeer Hussain were accused of making over 3,500 illegal appointments in the works department across several districts in previous years. These positions reportedly account for Rs1.2 billion in salaries every year. This issue has been raised many times in the G-B legislative assembly and officials demanded the appointments be investigated. A recent enquiry concluded the suspected inductions were illegal and were causing a huge burden on G-B's financial resources.

“Diamer-Bhasha to get top priority”

The Frontier Post, April 20, 2014

Chairman designate, Wapda Zafar Mehmood in an interview briefly explained his working agenda, placing construction of the 4,500MW Diamer-

Bhasha Dam project on top of his priority list. "Diamer-Bhasha Dam project is vital for the country in terms of power generation and overcoming the prevailing energy crisis; therefore, it will be on top of my priority list," he stated. This project is the need of the hour to meet energy requirements of household consumers and industry as well as to avert droughts. Recently, the nation has witnessed Thar tragedy where scores of children have died and hundreds of thousands residents are suffering due to drought. If large reservoirs like Diamer-Bhasha are not constructed on war-footing, other parts of Pakistan could also be affected by the drought especially Cholistan in Punjab province. It was criminal negligence on the part of our successive governments that they did not build any major reservoir after Mangla and Tarbela dam whose storage capacity is shrinking due to silt each passing day. Kalabagh dam has been abandoned because of reservations of Sindh and Khyber-Pakhtunkhwa. Various governments took the plea that it will create disharmony in the country. One should not ignore the reality that our four provinces are desperately calling for sufficient water to cultivate their lands, and are suspicious of each other on the distribution of water. Will it not be a source of disharmony?

Shabbir Mir, “Wheat subsidy protests: G-B protesters threaten to block Karakoram Highway, hold long march”

The Express Tribune, April 20, 2014

GILGIT: Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) continues to be in the grip of protests after the federal government's refusal to restore the region's wheat subsidy. The shutter-down strike announced by the Awami Action Committee (AAC) entered its fifth day on April 19. The strikes were launched to pressure the government into restoring G-B's wheat subsidy which was put in place by Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto owing to the region's remote location and poor economy. The AAC, an alliance of around 23 religious, nationalist and political groups formed earlier this year with the single objective of lowering wheat prices, says it will continue the strike till its demands are met. “Our demands remain unchanged and we will call off the strike after we get written orders from the government,” stated Maulana Sultan Raees, a member of the AAC's executive body, on April 19.

“Suspension of Gilgit-Pindi bus service threatened”

The Express Tribune, April 20, 2014

GILGIT: Office bearers of the Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) Transport Association and Kohistan Transport Association (KTA) on April 19 threatened to suspend the bus service between G-B and Rawalpindi over their disapproval of the 'convoy system'. At least 30 buses are escorted together on the Karakoram Highway (KKH) from Gilgit to Rawalpindi and made to stop at several check posts for clearance. As a result, people travelling on passenger buses have to travel for at least 26 hours instead of 13 to reach Rawalpindi from Gilgit. The system was introduced as part of official security measures following terrorist attacks on the KKH in 2011-12, when selected passengers were made to disembark and were then shot dead on the strategic highway. In case transporters go through with their threat, the plight of passengers will be exacerbated as they will be forced to spend extra on private vehicles. We go on strike from April 24 if the convoy system is not abolished, threatened presidents of GTBA and KTA on April 19.

“Environmental conservation: one percent of Diamer-Bhasha Dam project cost must be allocated: Prime Minister”

Business Recorder, April 18, 2014

Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif on April 17 stated that the construction of Diamer-Bhasha Dam will not only cater for energy requirements of the country but at the same time, it would be a source of development for Gilgit-Baltistan. The Dam will prove to be an economic milestone for the country, he stated while reviewing progress on Diamer-Bhasha Dam Project at the PM House. The Prime Minister directed that one percent of the project cost should be allocated, specifically for environmental conservation so that local vegetation and wildlife resources are not affected. He stated the first preference for un-skilled jobs, should be given to locals of the project area.

Shabbir Mir, “Overcoming sectarianism in G-B”

The Express Tribune, April 18, 2014

Strikes and counter strikes along sectarian lines had what described Gilgit-Baltistan's (G-B) politics in the recent past. The trend escalated especially after 2011-12 when passengers travelling by bus on the strategic Karakoram Highway between Gilgit and Rawalpindi were attacked and killed. While the sectarian motivated murders strengthened the clergy, it widened the existing gap between Shiites and Sunnis. Subsequently, Gilgit city stood divided between the two sects, making life hell for the commoners.

But in 2014, G-B witnessed a change. Inhabitants of G-B set aside sectarian differences and waged a joint struggle for a common cause. That happened due to efforts from Awami Action Committee (AAC). Formed this year by a group of comparatively little known politicians, including advocate Ehsan Ali and Baba Jan, the AAC made 'restoration of wheat subsidy' the centre of its politics. It was in 2013 when the prices of wheat began escalating. The regional government of G-B gradually started lifting the subsidy that Zulfikar Ali Bhutto had sanctioned for the G-B at least four decades ago sanctioning rampant poverty in the administrative region.

“Kashgar-Gwadar corridor to bring prosperity to Gilgit-Baltistan people”

Business Recorder, April 18, 2014

Construction of Kashgar- Gwadar economic corridor would help Pakistan to earn billions of rupees every year through export of fruits and livestock to China and other neighbouring countries. The main strength of economy of Gilgit-Baltistan (GB) depends largely on fruits and horticulture, and after the construction of the stated economic corridor, GB would be able to introduce locally produced items in international markets besides earning foreign exchange, stated Deputy Director Trade Development Authority of Pakistan (TDAP)- Gilgit, Sabz Ali Khan.

There is an increasing demand of fruits and vegetables in China it would be a great opportunity for GB to export local produce to big Chinese market. He stated efforts have to be made to improve the livelihood of the mountaineers in the years ahead, and added that one of the options available is to process the fruit locally to increase its shelf life and to add to its value, so that it may be transported economically.

Roshan Din Shad, “Kashmir sets up environment tribunals to curb pollution”

Thomson Reuters Foundation, April 25, 2014

MUZAFFARABAD: Gazing at smoke from the engines of decades-old buses and trucks, mingling with the dust spat out by stone-crushing machines near his bookshop on a busy road in Muzaffarabad, Shoukat Awaz Mir has the satisfaction of knowing that people like him finally have a way to fight pollution: They can sue. The government of Pakistan-administered Kashmir (Azad Jammu and Kashmir, or AJK) has inaugurated tribunals dedicated to hearing cases against violators of the northern region's environmental laws. The courts were authorised by the legislative assembly 12 years ago. But officials at the AJK Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) say lack of money prevented it from setting them up until now.

“Matter of survival: 'Govt must extend wheat subsidy to Gilgit-Baltistan”

The Express Tribune, April 24, 2014

LAHORE: “The issue of wheat subsidy for the people of Gilgit-Baltistan has been left to fester too long. The government must do something about it as soon as possible,” Pakistan Peoples Party Punjab secretary general Tanvir Ashraf Kaira stated on April 23. He was commenting on the formation of a committee, led by Federal Minister for Kashmir Affairs and Gilgit-Baltistan, Chaudhry Barjees Tahir, to look into the matter. Kaira questioned the wisdom of the government's inaction on the issue. “The minister's explanation was unfortunate...he passed the blame onto the local administration saying it was a matter between the people of Gilgit-Baltistan and their government.” He noted wheat subsidy was a federal subject.

“Gilgit-Baltistan alienation”

Dawn, April 25, 2014

The ongoing popular protests that have roiled Gilgit-Baltistan over the past 10 days are reflective of the growing sense of alienation the region's people are beginning to feel. Thousands have taken to the streets in various towns of GB, with major sit-ins taking place in Gilgit and Skardu. The ostensible trigger for the protests was the recent withdrawal of the wheat subsidy, which has sent prices of the essential food item spiralling in the underdeveloped region. However, the demonstrations, organised under the banner of the Awami Action Committee, an umbrella group bringing together over 20 political, religious and nationalist parties, are about more than just the price of wheat.

The protesters have issued a charter of nine demands, which range from reduction in the prices of other basic items to bringing down load-shedding. The demonstrations are also being seen as a manifestation of popular frustration with the regional government for alleged corruption, especially in the GB education department, where jobs were reportedly doled out through questionable means. It is also noteworthy that protests have cut across sectarian and sub-regional lines, as both the Shia and Sunni communities are participating and people from all districts in the region are marching for their demands.

Shabbir Mir, “Day nine: AAC's protest over wheat prices sees renewed vigour”

The Express Tribune, April 24, 2014

GILGIT: Agitation across Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) over the wheat subsidy gained momentum as delegations from other parts of the region reached Gilgit on April 23. Convoys from Skardu and Astore valleys reached the protest camp at Ghari Bagh by April 22 night, injecting new life into the movement which entered its ninth day on April 23.

They stayed in the camp overnight while residents extended hospitality by providing them food and water. Well-fed and rested, the speakers kept a crowd of nearly 20,000 engaged. They criticised the government, bureaucracy and ministers for being unable to resolve their issues and even demanded resignations from ministers, saying they have failed the public time and again over the past four years.

“Listen to us our so-called rulers!” shouted one of the leaders of Awami Action Committee (AAC) from the crowd. Amid loud jeers, he added: “We are not going to withdraw at any cost. Subsidy is our right and we will get it by hook or by crook.”

“PPP demands restoration of wheat subsidy for GB province”

The Nation, April 24, 2014

LAHORE: The PPP has demanded restoration of wheat subsidy for the people of Gilgit Baltistan. Though the government has formed a committee led by Federal Minister for Kashmir Affairs and Northern Regions Barjees Tahir to resolve the issue, the PPP has called upon the government to resolve the issue at the earliest. PPP Punjab Secretary General Tanvir Ashraf Kaira, in a statement, questioned the rationale presented by the federal minister Barjees Tahir who had stated that it was a matter between the local population and the government of GB.

He stated this was not the case as the federal government had withdrawn wheat subsidy for the people of GB and the federal minister's statement was highly misplaced. “The withdrawal or restoration of wheat subsidy is purely federal government's subject and a matter between the local administrations is highly misplaced,” Kaira maintained. He argued the people of the region were poor and the wheat subsidy made the difference in their subsistence level. “The IMF conditionalities should not be implemented at the expense of lives of the poor”, he insisted.

“Gilgit-Baltistan ruthlessly exploited by Pakistan”

ANI, April 28, 2014

GENEVA: Gilgit Baltistan that was annexed from the erstwhile princely state of Jammu and Kashmir is located strategically between Pakistan, India, China and Afghanistan. It has been controlled by Pakistan for decades now, and suffers from sectarian violence, militancy, poverty and unemployment. Senge Sering, president of the U.S. based Institute for Gilgit Baltistan Studies, blamed Pakistan for exploiting the region and fulfilling its own strategic interests. Many mega dams are under construction by Pakistan, including the Diamer-Bhasha Dam on the River Indus, which has been facing criticism from locals.

“For better produce: Training launched for farmers in G-B”

The Express Tribune, April 27, 2014

GILGIT: A recently initiated project aims to increase the quality and production of various fruits of Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B). “We have launched separate courses for apple, potato and apricot farming so farmers can better understand how to increase their yield,” stated Muhammad Irfan, the project's coordinator, while talking to journalists in Gilgit. In this connection, renowned experts have been invited to train farmers in Ghizer, Gilgit, Hunza-Nagar and Bagrote areas with comparatively better climatic conditions and potential for increased yield of fruits. The project has been launched by Star Farm Pakistan, an agro-consultancy firm, with the support of USTATED's Small Grants and Ambassador's Fund Programme, to improve quality and increase production of G-B's key fruit species.

“The soil here is fertile and best suited for mass production,” stated Irfan, adding the produce can be increased considerably by helping farmers with technicalities.

“Committee report: 'The power lies in Islamabad'”

The Express Tribune, April 30, 2014

GILGIT: The power lies in Islamabad, rendering the Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) Legislative Assembly toothless. This was one of the findings of the nine-member senate committee investigating human rights issues in the region. “What we have found out is that the powers lie in Islamabad through the G-B Council, which is headed by the prime minister, and not with the G-B Assembly,” shared Senator Afrasiab Khattak on April 29 at a news conference at the Gilgit Press Club where the other senators were also present. “Even a peon cannot be appointed here without prior permission from Islamabad,” stated Khattak, who is heading a nine-member Senate Functional Committee investigating human rights violations in G-B. The finding is in stark contrast to earlier statements made by G-B Chief Minister Mehdi Shah who often boasted about the devolution of power, giving credit to former president Asif Zardari.

Ponum Humza, “Role of Gilgit in Pak economy”

Pakistan Observer, April 30, 2014

Gilgit is situated at the north of Pakistan. It is the hometown of beauty, various cultures and numerous languages. Gilgit region has been given many names, like Jewel of Pakistan, Asia's wonderland and Roof of the world. It is considered to be paradise when it comes to explaining the beauty of this region. Strategically speaking, Gilgit is one of the most important regions of Pakistan as it borders the territory of Azad Kashmir to the south, the Province of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa to the west, the Wakhan Corridor of Afghanistan to the north, China to the east and northeast and the Jammu and Kashmir state of India to the southeast. It is only 15 km away from Central Asia. However, despite the efforts of the local government of Gilgit-Baltistan to officially become a part of Pakistan as its 5th Province, the Pakistani Government has put in little or no efforts to declare this region Pakistan's official Province. Gilgit play a vital role in economy of Pakistan as its mountains are full of minerals and precious stones. These are the main source of economy but unfortunately Pakistan cannot get benefit as much as it should. K2 is the second-highest mountain on Earth.

“PoK border villages still live in darkness”

ANI, April 18, 2014

POONCH: The dull orange of the bulb's filament flickers uncertainly against the chilly dusk of the muted mountains. The grimy but warmly-clad figure, limping from a decade-old bullet injury in his leg, thinks nothing of the virtually unlit bulb in the setting darkness as he goes about lighting the rudimentary kerosene lamp that throws eerie shadows on the mud walls of his two-room hutment. To a first time visitor, the setting is surreal. But to the slightly-bent man with a flowing beard, looking older than his years, it is simply the end of another hard day. Life-as-usual in the lives of those who call the Pir Panchal ranges their home.

“Unpopular policies: G-B govt continues to take flak over decision to charge patients”

The Express Tribune, April 13, 2014

GILGIT: A year on, the government's decision to charge patients at hospitals in Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) continues to attract heavy criticism in the region. “This is sheer injustice with the poor people of G-B,” stated former G-B President of Pakistan Medical Association Dr Muhammad Zaman, while addressing a news conference at Gilgit Press Club on April 12.

Zaman runs a non-governmental organisation by the name of G-B World Forum. “If we take up this matter with the United Nations Commission for Human Rights (UNCHR), it will be a huge embarrassment for the G-B government,” stated Zaman. “I suggest they consider this decision before that happens.” He demanded an independent audit be conducted of the money collected, saying that the flawed system at hospitals offers many chances for corruption. Zaman called on doctors to take the interests of patients into consideration as well, adding that it is something that their profession demands.

Shabbir Mir, “Territory dispute: Opposition leader fears more clashes this grazing season”

The Express Tribune, April 11, 2014

GILGIT: Opposition leader in the Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) Assembly, Janbaz Khan has warned that more clashes between the residents of Diamer Valley and Kohistan can follow if the territorial dispute remains unsolved. At least seven people were killed and a dozen others injured in an exchange of fire between residents of Thor in G-B and Harban in Kohistan in February. The nearly 10-kilometre stretch of land on both sides of the Basari check post, which separates Kohistan from Gilgit-Baltistan, has long been a bone of contention between Thor Valley, Diamer and Harban Nala, Kohistan. The disputed land is among the areas being demarcated for acquisition for the much-awaited Diamer-Bhasha dam project. “Diamer residents will be taking their livestock to the pastures on this land, as grazing season has begun in G-B. This might lead to more clashes,” the Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz (PML-N) lawmaker told reporters on April 10.

GILGIT: Staying true to its word, the Awami Action Committee (ACC) succeeded in its call for a shutter down and transport strike in parts of Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) on April 15. The Express Tribune, April 5, 2014

CHILAS: The otherwise barren landscape of Diamer Valley of Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) has literally turned over a new leaf because of a 'mass plantation drive' being carried out by residents. However, this drive is not meant for gaining ecological benefits, instead, it is reportedly being carried out as a means to make money when the government finally doles out compensation for the Diamer-Bhasha Dam.

“This is sort of an investment which locals are making in the hope that these trees would be included in the compensation paid for their land,” stated Ghulam Rasool, a resident of Bunar Valley situated along the Karakoram Highway. The 'plantation drive' continues unchecked in areas from Chilas to Raikote Bridge, the area demarcated for Diamer-Bhasha Dam, ignoring a ban imposed by the government in 2007 under the Land Acquisition Act, 1984.

Rinchan Ali Mirza, “End of a cultural era: Rajas to ruins”

The Express Tribune, April 6, 2014

It might appear odd, even unbelievable, if one suggests a shared chapter in history between Gilgit-Baltistan and the Italian Renaissance. Like the Medicis family, which controlled Florence throughout much of the Renaissance and acted as patrons for writers, artists and thinkers in the region, the rajas or ruling families were the foundation for the cultural edifice of Gilgit-Baltistan. Art, poetry, music and folklore flourished during their rule and carved a distinct identity for the area. Shigar valley gateway to the mighty Karakoram. Once the Medicis were ousted by a fanatical priest in the early 16th century, Florence never returned to its former glory. The royal families of Gilgit-Baltistan suffered the same fate after the introduction of land reforms in the region during the 1970s. And cultural deterioration in the region has been its biggest price.

The Express Tribune, April 4, 2014

GILGIT: Gilgit-Baltistan (G-B) Assembly will get technical assistance from United Nations Development Program (UNDP) in forming legislation for local government. A select committee of G-B, headed by regional Law Minister Ali Madad Sher, has sought UNDP's support in accordance with constitutional provisions, provincial perspectives and best practices. Triggered by the introduction of the 18th Amendment in 2010, this initiative is one more chapter in the ongoing discourse and efforts regarding policy initiatives on the local administrative level. The UNDP has been playing an advisory role in discussing ways to make grassroots representation more effective. It launched its first development magazine in the country in January 2014, with the first edition focusing on 'A New Way Forward for Local Governance in Pakistan.' In helping G-B carve out a new way forward, UNDP identified a few areas where it could help, such as drafting local government law and organising multi-stakeholder consultations to get feedback in this regard, as well as reviews of other provincial laws and best practices. “The basic format for the assistance has been discussed and agreed upon,” stated Altaf Hussain, Director Programmes at Gilgit-Baltistan Policy Institute (GBPI), a non-profit organisation

“A green massacre”

The News, April 1, 2014

Mass-scale deforestation is taking place in in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa and Gilgit-Baltistan. Their respective governments seem to have surrendered to the timber mafia that has reduced the forest cover of the country from 18 percent to only 2.5 percent, thus increasing several risks including landslides, flash floods and threatening wildlife habitat and glaciers. The total silence of the authorities on such a huge national loss is beyond understanding. While travelling on the Karakoram Highway you only see thousands and thousands of trees logged by the roadside. The terrible view of this massacre starts from the Kohistan district of KP and continues up to the end of the Diamer district in Gilgit-Baltistan.

“Cultural crisis in GB, Aziz Ali Dad”

The News, April 16, 2014

Cultural crisis in Gilgit-Baltistan is home to diverse linguistic, religious and ethnic groups. During the last two decades the word culture has become very popular among the people there, the youth in particular. That is why culture is invoked by different sub-regional groups, nationalists and language communities to lend legitimacy to their respective causes. However, the debate about culture in Gilgit-Baltistan does not stem from a clear definition. Within localised discourse the very word 'culture' is employed to signify an assortment of things, ranging from history, tradition, mythology, rituals, folk literature, cuisine, material heritage, dance, art to entertainment and incompatible entities. That means that the word culture is internalised not in all its theoretical purity, rather it has been appropriated by different groups to provide a unifying point for their practices and ideas, which are not always shared by all people in society.
