News and Analysis

19 Israel and U.S. Strike Iran's Nuclear Program

U.S. President Donald Trump claims that Israeli and U.S. strikes "obliterated" Iran's nuclear program but other experts were more cautious.

21 Trump Administration Increases Nuclear Weapons Budget

New programs and accelerated funding would increase Pentagon spending on nuclear forces to $62 billion in the Trump administration's 2026 defense budget request.

23 U.S. Energy Department to Reshuffle Warhead Budgets

The U.S. Department of Energy wants to increase funding for the W93 submarine-launched ballistic missile warhead while scaling back the W87-1 intercontinental ballistic missile warhead.

24 UK to Purchase F-35As and Join NATO Nuclear Mission

The decision represents an expansion of UK involvement beyond its purely sea-based nuclear force for the first time in this millennium.

25 Russian Strategic Forces Suffer Twin Setbacks

Ukrainian forces destroyed an estimated 12 Russian strategic bombers, days after Danish and German media published details of Russian missile bunkers.

26 IAEA Gains Access to Former Syrian Nuclear Sites

Syria's decision to give the International Atomic Energy Agency unrestricted access to the sites will help resolve a yearslong investigation into the country's nuclear program.

27 Republican Spending Bill Revives Program for Radiation Victims

It took two years for House Republican leaders to agree to extend and expand an expired law that will help many downwinders exposed to the fallout from U.S. nuclear testing and certain uranium miners.

28 U.S. Supreme Court Rejects Mexico's Gun Lawsuit

The Mexican government brought the action over concerns about gun violence and the surge of weapons imported from the United States that benefit Mexican gun cartels.

THE WASHINGTON QUARTERLY

5 PROVOCATIONS

7 Global Swing States and the New Great Power Competition

■ Richard Fontaine and Gibbs McKinley

Policymakers should focus on these six “global swing states” that will together exert disproportionate influence over the future of international order. That requires the United States to deal with each, not simply as a pawn in great-power competition, but as an important country in their own right with interests that differ from, but can ultimately align with, those of the US.

29 Iran’s Strategic Crossroads: Options Beyond the Axis?

■ Mahsa Rouhi

Events of 2023-2024, culminating with the collapse of the Assad regime in Syria, have brought Iran’s regional strategy—a triad of ballistic missile capabilities, nuclear latency, and a decentralized network of regional armed partners—to a moment of reckoning. Will Tehran double down on support for the “Axis of Resistance,” or pivot toward regional diplomacy and economic normalization? The answer will define a new phase in Middle East geopolitics.

43 China’s Strategic Calculus: It’s Not Just About Economics

■ Gangsheng Bao

Beijing’s strategic decisions, such as its response to US tariffs, often confound Western policymakers and analysts, risking dangerous miscalculations, because of the unique logic of China's political system. The key to understanding China's behavior is understanding five key strategic considerations that this political system shapes for Beijing.

59 Surprising Stability in the Diaoyu/Senkaku Islands Since 2012

■ Duan Xiaolin and Hao Yufan

Since 2012, the Diaoyu/Senkaku islands dispute has surprisingly stabilized, with Tokyo and Beijing both taking steps to reduce tensions. Although the risk of territorial crisis remains, overlooking three elements of Beijing's restraint—tamping down on popular nationalism, limiting escalatory posture, and prioritizing economic development—could lead to misunderstanding China's overall strategy.

77 Protecting Undersea Cables and South Korea's Role

■ Amy Paik

The growing frequency of high-profile undersea cable disruptions have exposed the extent to which global connectivity hinges on their integrity and vulnerabilities. Despite their strategic significance, these cables remain insufficiently protected. South Korea, home to one of the world's largest fiber-optic cable manufacturers and consistent with its vision to become a global pivotal state, is uniquely positioned to spearhead efforts in advancing undersea cable governance.

93 NUCLEAR FORTRESS AMERICA?

95 Can the Iron Dome Be Transmuted into a Golden Dome?

■ Steve Fetter and David Wright

Israel's apparent success in defending against Iranian ballistic missile attacks in 2024 has stimulated renewed interest in missile defense. This experience, however, has little or no relevance to defending against long-range nuclear missiles, which would be equipped with countermeasures and require different defensive systems. There remains no basis for believing an effective defense is possible against long-range nuclear-armed missiles.

115 European Deterrence at a Crossroads: French and British Nuclear Options

■ Astrid Chevreuil

The war in Ukraine and Donald Trump's second term have intensified European conversations about diversifying nuclear options. The two established European nuclear powers have a valuable opportunity to create additional nuclear security guarantees for their European allies and reinforce the long-term credibility and resilience of Europe's collective security framework.

I33 WINNING THE TECH COMPETITION

135 America's Advantages: Contending with China's Tech Rise

■ Andrew Kennedy

While the US remains an impressive leader in many regards, China's recent emergence as a technology power is nothing short of remarkable. The good news is that the US has three distinctive strengths that China has no chance of replicating in the foreseeable future; the bad news is that the US has neglected these strengths in recent years—a neglect poised to become more pronounced in the years to come.

153 Winning the Defining Contest: The US-China Artificial Intelligence Race

■ Brandon Kirk Williams

Two events in the waning months of 2022 inaugurated a new era of US-China artificial intelligence and innovation competition, the defining geopolitical contest of the twenty-first century. What is at stake? And what should the United States do to preserve preeminence in this defining contest in the decades ahead?
